OUR 56TH YEAR | 10¢ PER COPY | SIKESTON, SCOTT COUNTY, MISSOURI, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28, 1967 | NUMBER 234

Hearnes Praises Work of Cooperative

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes praising the Scott - New Madrid - Mississippi Electric Cooperative for its work over the past quarter century to bring rural Missouri out of the darkness.

The governor arrived at the airport at 1:45 p.m., after being delayed by high water at the Jefferson City airport for more than an hour. He was introduced by Harry C. Blanton. He spoke to more than 1,200 persons.

In his praise of the rural electric cooperative, he quoted to an editorial by his friend, Charley Blanton, saying, "it is the editor's belief that the rural areas of the United States would still be in darkness without competent, efficient and popular operations of the Rural Electric Administration. The Scott-New Madrid - Mississippi Cooperative, which operates in our territory, has done a magnificent job in bringing light and power to the farmers and its maintenance and service has not to my knowledge, received a single complaint."

An electric freezer was won by Joe Wade, Oran, and an air-conditioner by D. P. Pruett, Sikeston rural.

Four directors chosen were Jesse Bennett, Bloomfield; Alwin Gasser, Sikeston; E. S. Nelson, Wyatt, and Tom Moore, Matthews.

At a board meeting held at the cooperatives office building officers were re-elected. They were Ernest Moxley, Charleston, president; Earl Weeks, Bell City, vice - president; Alwin Gasser, Sikeston, secretary-treasurer; Gordon Stroud, Matthews, assistant secretary, and James Stephenson, secretary.

Hearnes said that the state's toll road needs were immediate.

"Our present system of highways is now three years behind on its program," he said. "If the people will approve the new roads they will be able to travel in safety over four lanes and after they are paid for can be leased to the state highway department for maintenance. A new program would spread over the entire state thereby bringing our roads up-to-date with neighboring states. The toll roads are my dreams to make Missouri a better state, and all my efforts will be used to bring this about."

James C. Stephenson, secretary of the cooperative, presided. He announced in his annual report that there was six per cent increase in overhead expenses, which was a little greater than the growth of kilowatt sales.

"We have changed Howardville and Haywood City over to our town home rate in place of the farm - home rate. We have used up six months of our advance money, called cushion of credit in Washington, to bridge the gap. The Vietnam war is causing the advance government payments to be held back, unless they are absolutely needed.

"Today our cooperative has a larger construction crew than any one of its size. In 1966, 200 poles were changed, and more than 800 bad poles were replaced. We will no longer qualify for any two per cent money. If the 90th congress passes the federal electric bank for loans, we will be able to borrow at going rates.

"The idea of the electric cooperative way is sound, and our organization is healthy. The response of the people is worth more than words in benefits from the REA, which has a duty to provide electricity at a price the members can afford to pay."

EAST PRAIRIE -- In a light turnout yesterday voters approved renewal of the Associated Natural Gas Company's franchise to supply natural gas to the city, 52-1.

Under the franchise, which is for 10 years with two five-year renewal options, the company will pay the city a tax of 5 per cent of its receipts instead of the present 2 per cent.

Brick Replaces

Sod at Library

The brick was laid in a shady area where trampling by children's feet prevented grass from growing and shrubbery did not thrive.

Grand Jury to Probe

Powell's Records

WASHINGTON (AP)— A federal grand jury wants a look at Adam Clayton Powell's expense records as part of its probe of the elected but unseated congressman's affairs.

Powell, a Democrat from Harlem, was excluded from the House at the start of the current session because of alleged financial misconduct.

The grand jury's request for travel vouchers and telephone costs of Powell and his staff was revealed Tuesday when the House clerk and sergeant-at-arms said they have been subpoenaed to bring the records to a grand jury session Aug. 7 in Washington and the House gave its required approval.

Morris Enters Race Again

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Lewis E. Morris of Jefferson City, a pharmaceutical engineer, filed today for the Democratic nomination for treasurer in the 1968 primary.

Morris regularly runs for high public office and just as frequently loses. He lost to M. E. Morris in the 1964 primary.

William Robinson of Jefferson City announced Tuesday his resignation as president of Frontier Tower Life Insurance Co. He said he wanted to devote more time to public office but reports have been growing he wants to seek the Democratic nomination for treasurer.

In Missouri the treasurer cannot succeed himself. M. E. Morris has been switching from the appointive office of state revenue director to the elective office of treasurer and back every four years since 1945.

Unaligned Ask Troop Withdrawal

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)— The nonaligned members of the United Nations agreed today on a resolution calling for the immediate withdrawal of Israeli troops from Arab territory.

They authorized the group chairman, Yugoslav Ambassador Danilo Lekic, to present the proposal to the emergency session of the General Assembly later in the day.

Pope Confers New Cardinals

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI conferred red birettas on 24 new cardinals in the Sistine Chapel tonight and said he would give greater power than ever to the princes of the Roman Catholic Church.

Speaking in Latin at the consistory ceremony, the Pope rejected any notion that the College of Cardinals was outdated and would eventually be replaced by the new synod of bishops. The synod will meet for the first time in September at the Vatican.

Pope Paul placed a red hat on each of the new cardinals as they kneeled below Michelangelo's famed murals in the richly frescoed chapel.

Kroger Store to Close

The Kroger Co., 205 West Malone, will close Saturday. The building will be used by Two Tony's Smorgasbord.

A representative of the Memphis division of Kroger Company confirmed today that the store will close. No immediate plans for opening another store were announced.

Kroger officials expressed the opinion that another store may be opened later.

On April 14, it was announced that the restaurant would be built on the old south grade school lot in the 300 block of West Malone. The initial announcement called for a building to seat 800 persons.

Jarvis said today that the owners decided to utilize the Kroger building to open for business sooner. An addition to the building is being constructed but the seating capacity is expected to be between 450 and 500.

Remodeling of the interior is planned, and the owners hope to open for business between Aug. 15 and Sept. 1.

The latest in kitchen equipment for fast service will be installed. The dining area will be carpeted.

The outside of the building will be sandblasted to improve the appearance, Foder said.

A 35 by 60 feet addition is being constructed at the rear of the present building to house the kitchen. Overall the building will be 160 by 60 feet.

Two banquet rooms will be enclosed.

Waitresses will dress in Swedish costumes.

House Delays Remap Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House sent a proposed congressional redistricting bill back to a House-Senate conference today to try to work out another approach.

The rejected bill, which would have postponed state action to equalize districts until 1972, had aroused widespread confusion among members. Most of them saw it in print only shortly before they were expected to vote on it.

With the house about to shut down for a 10-day holiday recess, no action will be taken for at least two weeks.

The decision to return the bill to conference was reached after members flooded house leaders with private protests and there were strong indications it might be defeated on the floor. The action was taken by unanimous consent without debate.

Conferences between House and Senate on different versions of the same legislation generally end in a compromise somewhere in the middle. But the redistricting bill adopted in conference took a different course.

By its terms it provides that no state would be required to redistrict in accordance with the Supreme Court's one man-one vote mandate until after a federal census. The next regular census will be taken in 1970.

One of many questions raging unanswered through the House Tuesday was the effect the proposal would have on lower courts, which have been moving vigorously to enforce the Supreme Court ruling.

"If this means the courts shall do nothing until 1972," said Rep John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., "then it amounts to a postponement of a constitutional right and Congress can't do that by simple statute.

"If it is just advisory and the courts can go ahead as they have, then it is meaningless." Conyers was the only House member of the conference committee to vote against the bill, which is a compromise of sorts between different measures passed by the House and Senate. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was the only Senate conferee to dissent.

Reading Program to Begin

The summer reading program at the public library will be conducted each Monday from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. in July.

All children up to junior high school age are invited to take part to learn about the pioneer days from such books as "Pioneer Traders," "Over the Mormon Trail," "Pigtail Pioneers," "Wilderness Journey," "The Trail to Santa Fe," "Holding the Fort with Daniel Boone," "The Cabin Faced West," "Prairie School," "Crazy Horse: Sioux Warrior," "Davy Crockett's Earthquake."

Each week the leader will read parts of the story "The Tree in the Trail" by Holling C. Holling.

Mrs. Frank Sibley will be in charge. Mrs. J. L. Howle's Girl Scout troop will assist.

Police Nab New Madrid Jail Escapee

Glen Ray Richardson, 27, Matthews, was arrested by Sikeston police Tuesday night on Luther Street and is being held for New Madrid county authorities.

Richardson escaped from the New Madrid county jail twice, the last time was about two months ago, police reported. Richardson is charged with auto theft by New Madrid county authorities.

Richardson was arrested in an automobile and had a .38 caliber pistol on his person at the time of arrest, Police Chief Arthur Bruce, one of the arresting officers, said.

About six pocket watches, a suitcase of underwear and about 20 new cartons of 30-30 shells were in the car. Police are investigating to see if the items were stolen.

Gentry Hicks, East St. Louis, Ill., apparently had been in the company of Richardson, police said. Hicks was driving the car Richardson was sitting in at the time of his arrest, police said. Hicks was not in the car when Richardson was arrested. He was stopped later on Petty Street, police reported.

Hicks is wanted for parole violation, police said. He is being transferred to Scott county authorities.

Governor Signs Variety of Bills

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) Gov. Warren E. Hearnes signed a bill Tuesday that will change the school administrative system in St. Louis County, putting the entire responsibility under the supervision of one superintendent instead of four as it is now.

The governor also signed a bill making the closing time of all bars the same throughout the state.

He signed other bills to make it necessary for trucks to cover loose loads, set the fine for overweight trucks at 2 cents per pound, liberalize disability retirement benefits for St. Louis firemen, allow construction of another state office building in Jefferson City and transfer a statue of Gen. John J. Pershing now on the Capitol grounds to Pershing State Park.

Prohibition Party

Convention Opens

DETROIT (AP) — The Prohibition party, losing votes and fights to get on the ballot, opened its national convention a year early today with an attack on demon rum.

"Beverage alcohol must today be recognized as chief cause of poverty, broken homes, juvenile delinquency, vice, crime, political corruption, wasted manpower and highway accidents," the party's proposed platform stated.

Party leaders said they are holding the convention a year in advance of other major political conventions in order to give themselves time to circulate the petitions necessary to put their presidential candidate on the ballots.

Scuffle At Police Station

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick said today that he struck attorney Jim Robinson with his fist Sunday afternoon after Robinson called him "a son of a bitch."

Potashnick said they were arguing about Charlie Williams at the police station when the incident occurred. Williams was arrested Sunday afternoon and charged with first degree murder in connection with the pistol slaying of Joe Lee Matthews, Painton, in Sunset Addition.

Robinson is Williams' attorney. He refused to comment on the incident today.

Potashnick said he frequently had been in heated discussions with attorneys but none before had ever called him such a name.

He commented that he was not proud of the incident but wasn't ashamed of it either.

Toll Road Session

In Rolla Today

Representatives of Sikeston were invited to a meeting at Rolla today to form a concerted effort to assure further action for a north-south toll road in Missouri, Richard Pinkerton, manager of the Chamber of Commerce said today.

No representatives of the city were able to attend, due to previous commitments.

U.S. Urges Israel to Avoid Hasty Action in Jerusalem

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House made a public appeal to Israel today to avoid any quick annexation of the old section of Jerusalem seized from Jordan in the Middle East war.

"The President is confident that the wisdom and good judgment of those now in control of Jerusalem will prevent any such action," the statement said.

The pronouncement came on the heels of word from Jerusalem that the Israelis, in a step toward annexation, had unified municipal services between the sectors of the city.

Assistant press secretary Tom Johnson read the statement which said Johnson "assumes that before any unilateral action is taken on the status of Jerusalem there will be appropriate consultation with religious leaders and others who are deeply concerned."

The city, holy to adherents of three religious faiths, has been a center of conflict repeatedly during the last 20 years, the statement said.

"Men of all religions will agree that we must now do better," it said. "The world must find an answer that is fair and recognized to be fair. That could not be achieved by hasty, unilateral action."

Administration Prodded To Build Missile Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Johnson administration was prodded by House GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford today "to get off dead center and get going" on a thin antiballistic missile defense system for the United States.

"There just doesn't seem to be any choice as far as the United States is concerned," Ford told a news conference. "The Soviet Union is going to build an ABM system. They may be willing to talk but there is no reason why we shouldn't proceed as they are doing. If they will talk, that's all the better."

Ford, a Michigan Republican, took note of Communist China's first hydrogen bomb explosion earlier this month.

"With the United States and the U.S.S.R. standing each other off in nuclear deterrents," he said, "The possession of even one Red Chinese nuclear weapon that can be carried in one conventional bomber radically alters the balance of power in East Asia and the Western Pacific — areas which President Johnson has specifically proclaimed as vital to America's national interest and the fate of the free world."

Ford, in response to questions, said a thin system which would be beamed primarily to protection of Strategic Air Command installations, would cost an estimated $3 billion.

Election Reform Bill Called Curb on Wealthy

WASHINGTON (AP) — An administration spokesman testified today that President Johnson's election reform bill would curb the influence of wealthy individuals, but a senator said it would make "the sky the limit" on campaign spending.

The legislation submitted by the President would remove present ceilings on election expenditures for federal offices while tightening requirements for disclosure of where the money came from and how it was spent.

It would also limit to $5,000 the amount an individual or members of his family could contribute to any candidate's campaign.

Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., the first witness at hearings before the Senate elections subcommittee, agreed that present ceilings on expenditures are wholly unrealistic.

Junior College Aid Increased

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House today gave final approval to a bill increasing state aid to junior colleges. It now goes to the governor.

The state has been paying $240 per student for 30 semester hours of work. Under the new bill the state will increase the amount to $320 for 24 semes-

Remap Action Taken

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House version of congressional redistricting passed the Senate Tuesday night 29-3. It now goes to the governor.

The bill puts most of the 70,000 St. Louis negro voters in the 1st District represented now by Democrat Frank M. Karsten. It gives Negroes a chance to elect Missouri's first negro congressman although Karsten is credited with a liberal civil rights voting record.

Sen. Robert A. Young, D-St. Ann, fought the bill bitterly, partly because it puts his airport township in the Republican 2nd District of Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, R-Webster Groves.

Other incumbents were generally undisturbed although the 6th District of Rep. W. R. Hull, D-Weston in northeastern Missouri, represented by Rep. Richard Ichord, D-Houston, would be swing districts in Republican years.

Only three Democrats voted against the bill — Young, Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, and Edward Linehan, D-St. Louis.

Young argued the reapportionment plan was invalid under a federal court order requiring the legislature to redistrict according to the one man - one vote rule or 1968 congressional candidates would be forced to run at large.

Sen. Omar H. Avery, D-Troy, Senate reapportionment chairman, agreed it was "absolutely ridiculous" to redistrict now on the basis of 1960 census figures when the legislature will have to do the job all over after the 1970 census.

But he said under the court order it had to be done.

Some senators said use of the 1960 figures will make some of the urban districts more malapportioned than they are now.

120 Enrolled in Kiwanis Swimming Program

Three hundred twenty children have enrolled in the Kiwanis club swimming program this summer, Bob Meyer, chairman of the swimming lesson committee, reported at the weekly meeting Tuesday at the Holiday Inn.

Guests attending included Mayor Kendall Sikes, Earl Jarvis, Ernest Elledge and Don Lewis.

Dr. Paul S. Barnett, professor of economics at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau spoke on the great faiths of the American Heritage; faith in God, the individual, and freedom.

Dr. Barnett related that it is not enough to merely assert our faiths.

"We must give them life and meaning, by our works and in our daily lives. The faith of our pioneering ancestors was a living vital force. It was what sustained and guided them as they worked and fought to lay the foundations of a free society.

"To them, faith was a daily source of strength and comfort. It was this which they passed on to their children.

"In the present battle for the minds of men, can we, dare we, do less?" he asked.

Dr. Barnett concluded with a quotation from DeTocqueville when he visited America more than 100 years ago:

"I sought for the greatness and genius of America in her commodious harbors and her ample rivers, and it was not there; in her fertile fields and boundless prairies and it was not there . . .Not until I went to the churches of America and heard her pulpits aflame with righteousness did I understand the secret of her genious and power. America is great because she is good, and if America ever ceases to be good, America will cease to be great."

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Improved standards in road edge striping and lane markings may one day save your life - even when you're driving in that huge "traffic snarl" known as New York City.

To give motorists an extra edge of safety, America's first city is decorating 180 miles of limited access highways in the five boroughs. Edge lining and lane marking is expected to improve driving safety during the day and at night.

Using special trucks and reflectorized paint, traffic department crews are spraying a solid white line four inches wide along malls and curbs that divide paved roadways and shoulders of the city's expressways.

A double benefit is gained from the white lines, Henry A. Barnes, traffic commissioner, explained.

Striping the malls and curbing, he said, establishes guide lines to help motorists determine the width of the roadway. Secondly, the striping provides a sharp distinction between the ordinary road surface and the "treated" curbs or shoulders which, at night, glow in a car's headlights. Such edging and striping proves especially valuable as a safety feature at night or during inclement weather.

The painting program, Barnes stated, may well be a perpetual procedure in Manhattan's effort to reduce accidents. When the present program is done, in about one year, another will be started, he said.

Techniques of painting on canvas and on pavement can require a far different brush stroke, as Barnes observed.

Pavement painting, for example, is done in several ways.

Where there is a slanted curb, the curb itself is painted. But a straight curb requires a different technique, in which paint is laid six inches away from the curb. This is designed to prevent drivers from running into or jumping the curb.

When there is no curb, painting is also done six inches in from the edge line to discourage drivers from wandering off the road.

Will New York retain a number one rating in such safety applications? Barnes believes it will, although edge striping and lane marking are becoming common safety features in many cities today.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT

The appearance of Missouri's junior United States Senator, Edward V. Long, at last weekend's annual meeting of the Missouri Cotton Producers Assn. would prompt the conclusion that Bowling Green's most famous citizen does not intend to withdraw from political life at the end of his term in 1968. At least, it can be observed that he does not intend to withdraw voluntarily.

Senator Long's political and legal tribulations are, by now, well known to readers of this newspaper, which has commented on them extensively. The comments are also well known to Senator Long, who observed to a staff member of The Daily Democrat at the MCPA meeting that some of this publication's recent editorials had been less than kind toward him. This is an understatement, but we plead guilty.

We are not, however, guilty of condoning such practices as Senator Long has been following during his Senate career. Nor are we guilty of thinking that Senator Long, despite his close organized labor connections, will be any asset to the Democratic party in 1968.

Next year's election may well prove to be, in Missouri as well as elsewhere, a Republican election year. Whether it is depends in large measure upon the Democrats and upon those party members who are selected in the primaries.

If Missouri Democrats care to renominate Senator Long to head their state ticket in 1968, then we predict that the political careers of a good many Democrats in Jefferson City will be terminated as of January 1, 1969.

We believe it is that serious, and before the Senate Ethics Committee gets through, we believe it will be even worse.

Indeed, if Senator Long is on the ticket, we predict the Democrats of Missouri will be on the short end of the 1968 election totals.

It's as simple as that.

Two major crashes in the same state and a few days apart claimed the lives of eight people and injured two others.

Both accidents had the same cause: wrong-way driving.

Wrong-way driving, in which a driver travels against traffic on an expressway, is becoming a bigger problem, police reports indicate.

Your chances of meeting such a driver - or inadvertently becoming one yourself - are also increasing as more and more miles of expressways are added and the Interstate system nears completion.

Driving in the wrong direction, which frequently results in head-on collisions, can be a fatal mistake. Wrong-way accidents, according to J. C. Womack, California highway engineer, are fatal six times more often than other driving accidents.

What are the causes of wrong-way driving? Traffic experts have discovered several.

Driving while intoxicated is perhaps the leading reason. Of 500 wrong-way drivers interviewed by the California Highway Patrol one-third had been drinking. An equal number were honestly confused. One-sixth had strayed over the median strip to the wrong side of the highway by carelessness. A small number were illiterate and could not read traffic signs.

What is being done to stop wrong-way driving?

Many traffic experts believe that reflective "Wrong Way" signs used with "Do Not Enter" signs are the best solution to prevent drivers from entering expressways on exit ramps or leaving expressways by entrance ramps.

In Chicago, for example, large reflective signs, highly visible in headlights at night, are being erected on both sides of many exit ramps on the Kennedy expressway. Installation of such signs is planned for other expressways in the area.

According to the Michigan department of state highways, "Do Not Enter - Wrong Way" warning signs posted at exit ramps have substantially reduced wrong-way movements and head-on collisions.

If you encounter a wrong-way driver, don't try to warn him, one safety expert said. Signal a right turn, pull off on the shoulder and get out of the way, he advised.

THE VURST DAY OF SUMMER

This is a summer of anniversaries. New York City will celebrate the 50th year of Guggenheim Memorial Concerts in Central Park on Wednesday, June 21, the first day of summer. Appropriately, nickel beer, nickel ice cream, and nickel hot dogs will be served.

Just a few days later, the Coney Island Chamber of Commerce will celebrate what it claims as the 100th anniversary of the birth of the hot dog. The Chamber asserts that in the summer of 1867 a Coney Island pie hawker named Charlie Feltman put a hot sausage in a toasted wiener roll and sold it for a dime as a frankfurter - after his native Frankfurt, Germany. The Coney Island celebration will be centered on Nathan's Famous, the boardwalk stand which has sold more than 200 million franks.

Stories of the origin of the hot dog story. But the naming of the savory is generally attributed to Tad Dorgan, a New York newspaper cartoonist who saw franks being served for the first time in the early 1900's at the Polo Grounds. Dorgan also is responsible for "dumb Dora," "the cat's pajamas," and other nifties.

As for summer, weathermen are not prepared to say that the spring-that-never-was portends a cold summer. Since 1960 there have been indications that the North American climate is cooling slightly. It might be well to keep earmuffs handy. In 1816, snow fell in New England and parts of New York in June, July, and August.

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the great American myths is "the typical New Yorker."

By tradition, the typical New Yorker is a sophisticated fellow who hobnobs with celebrities, dwells in a penthouse, reads all the latest best sellers, eats only at the fanciest restaurants, spends his evenings at night clubs, gets daily inside tips on what to buy in Wall Street, and knows whom to call at City Hall if he wants to get a traffic ticket fixed.

He's a "guy in the know," and compared to him anybody who dwells west of the Hudson River is a hinterland hayseed.

Ah, me, if life were only like that!

After 30 years of dwelling in O. Henry's fabled Baghdad on the Subway, I've decided that when it comes to "the typical New Yorker" of romantic legend, there probably ain't no such animal.

The "typical New Yorker," if you do happen to meet one, usually turns out to be an out-of-towner here for a lark on a Texas-sized expense account.

"I don't see how you stand the pace here," he says, leaving for home after a week or two spent trying to paint the big city a vivid crimson. "It would get me down."

Such remarks make a real New Yorker want to slit the out-of-towner's throat quietly. For the real New Yorker, like most of his brethren across the country, has to make do on a pretty tight budget. He doesn't see as much of the high-living side of the city in a year as a fast-buck visitor sees in a few nights.

There has been a steady exodus of middle-class white people from the city for several decades. Now the middle-class Negroes and Puerto Ricans are doing the same thing. As soon as they can afford to, they also are moving out to the suburbs in Westchester County and Long Island.

It isn't the mass of natives who keep the $20-a-meal glitter spots and the big expensive Broadway musicals running. New York is a work city, rather than "Fun City," to them.

Your real New Yorker is a guy who labors at an anonymous skyscraper desk and selects his lunch from a drug counter menu.

Your real New Yorker is a Wall Street stenographer who pays more than she can afford for a tiny dark walkup apartment in a Greenwich Village building that would probably be condemned in Vermont as an eyesore.

But they all share that same big dream: to earn enough so they can move away to somewhere cleaner and less noisy and less expensive.

Then they can come back occasionally as tourists and enjoy the big city in the way that only the out-of-towner can, pockets loaded with butter-and-egg money burning to be spent.

VIETNAM: CHINA'S WAR OF ATTRITION

A general has sobering words for Americans.

The general is not William C. Westmoreland, who, in an action unprecedented for a field commander in a time of war, came home from Vietnam to address a joint session of Congress. He is Brig. Gen. Samuel B. Griffith (USMC, Ret.)

Like Westmoreland, however, Griffith foresees no early end to the righting in Vietnam. Holder of a Ph. D. from Oxford in Chinese history as well as the Distinguished Service Cross, Griffith, now a research associate at the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace, believes the war will go on as long as Communist China wants it to go on.

In a recently published book, "The Chinese People's Liberation Army," he writes that Peking "will exert every pressure and take every measure short of direct intervention on the ground to prolong the figthing in South Vietnam and to prevent negotiation of a settlement."

China's regional foreign policy goals have not changed since the Korean War, says Griffith. They are the elimination of American influence and presence from the Asia rimlands and the eventual breaking out of what she sees as an encirclement of her by hostile and menacing American power.

For some time to come, however, she will not be able to muster the economic, political, means to enable her to accomplish these objectives.

Thus an indefinite protration of hostilities in Vietnam is altogether favorable to China's interests - "for a long war will sap American energies, focus American attention on this area to the exclusion of others, drain American strength, impair American morale, damage American prestige, undermine American alliances and so concretely alter 'the balance of forces' to China's benefit."

It has often been said that we must learn to live with an aggressive, militant China.

This is true, agrees Griffith. "But it is equally true that China must learn to live with us and with the world community. At the present time she shows slight indication of wishing to do either."

IMPORTANCE OF RELIGION DECLINES IN AMERICA

When we say "one nation under God" we take it for granted that Americans are a religious people. But are they? Just how important is religion in the U. S., and to how many Americans? A Catholic Digest survey was designed to find out. George Gallup's public - opinion interviewers asked American adults, "How important would you say religion is in your own life -- very important, fairly important, or not very important?" This same question was asked in 1952; the current poll seeks to compare the change in attitudes over this 14-year period.

In a representative cross section of people from every region, religion, and walk of life 75% said religion was very important to them in 1952. Today, the percentage is down to 70%. Fourteen years ago 20% and religion was fairly important; 22% think so today. The number who regard religion as not very important is also up 2% - from 5% to 7&leoer to 7%.

The Congregationalists are the only ones stating that religion is more important is also up 2% - from 5% to 7%.

The Congregationalists are the only ones stating that religion is more important in 1966 than in 1952 -- from 57% to 62%. In 1952, 47% of the Jews thought religion very important; in1966, only 30% do. Religion is very important; in 1966, only 30% do. Religion is very important to 76% of Roman Catholics; it was 83% 14 years ago. All Protestant denominations are down but 2% - from 76% to 74%.

Among the Protestants, religion is very important to 82% of the Baptists; it was 84% in 1952. The greatest decline is the Methodists, 65% of whom say religion is very important compared to 74% 14 years ago. Sixty-two percent of Episcopalians think religion is very important today; 67% thought so in 1952. Lutherans are down 4% (from 70% to 66%) Presbyterians down 1% (from 72% to 71%).

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- George Brown, former teamster, now foreign secretary for her majesty the queen of England, was entertained by President Johnson at luncheon last week, and complained audibly that he was the only dignitary present who wore brown shoes.

Sitting beside Vice President Humphrey, once elected as a Democratic farmer labor representative from Minnesota, he engaged in some quick repartee with HHH about the danger of upstaging their respective bosses, the prime minister and the President.

"When I returned from the continent with my prime minister," said Brown, "there was a big crowd waiting for us at the airport. I looked out at the crowd, saw my wife and my little granddaughter. The photographers, of course, were there to greet them. But when my granddaughter came running across the airport and threw her arms around my neck the cameramen all deserted the PM and ran over to take me.

"This is no way for a foreign minister to act," Brown told Humphrey. "You don't get anywhere upstaging the prime minister."

Brown proceeded to tell how when vice president Humphrey was in London he visited No. 10 Downing Street, Chequers and Windsor Palace.

"Then I gave a little luncheon for him and told him I wanted him to meet my granddaughter. We went to my home but my granddaughter wasn't there. However, we did find my little dog. When the photographers came up I admonished Hubert, 'don't grab him by the ears.'"

Next day, Vice President Humphrey recalls, the British newspapers came out with a photograph of the vice president petting his dog, captioned, "Foreign Secretary advises Humphrey not to pull British Dog's ears."

WHIPPED IN ABSENTIA

Brown remarked that the British cabinet was "giving me the devil" since his speech at the United Nations admonishing Israel.

"Now that I'm away from my colleagues in the cabinet they're already giving me a whipping."

The foreign secretary sat beside congressman William Bates of Massachusetts who, when the conversation turned to No. 10 Downing Street, asked Brown, "do you know who Downing was?"

"Yes," said Brown. "An American. When you see my brother," he added, referring to the younger Brown who is a distinguished professor of history, "please tell him that this old Teamster knows some history too."

Vice President Humphrey told Brown that he had noted a portrait of William Pitt hanging in No. 10 Downing and was rather concerned to see it had been painted by an artist named Romney.

"I take exception to that kind of partisanship," said the vice president. "However, I was glad to see that the portrait of James Fox, the parliamentarian who took up for the American colonies, was hung in a place of honor."

BUILT TO LAST

Speaking of Americans, Brown mentioned the fact that he had been born in a London flat built by an American named Samuel Peabody, who at that time was considered a great benefactor because he had tried to remedy the housing shortage.

"That house is now 100 years old and it still stands. I was 16 before I ever saw a water tap," said Brown. "What toilet facilities we had were communal. If you see my mother, don't tell her I complained about my birthplace, but it was a very dull, dingy abode, not given to much inspiration.

"I told the prime minister," continued Brown, "that if I'm ever knighted I'll probably be given the title 'Lord Peabody of the building.'"

Brown told how his brother, seven years younger, had run for parliament and has proposed a new tax just three days before election.

"'I need to have words with you,' I told my brother. 'You might be a fine professor but you're not a sound politician. You're going to get whipped. You don't propose a tax increase just before election.' And I described this in Teamster Irish terms. My brother was not pleased.

"Whereupon he won a smashing victory. The next day he phoned me and said, 'perhaps if you can spare the time you'd like to see me again on the subject of politics.'"

A BOMBS AND DICE

The gambling fraternity and citizens of Las Vegas, Nevada, will be glad to know that the atomic energy commission is not planning to disrupt the sporting atmosphere of their city with close - up nuclear blasts.

AEC chairman Glenn Seaborg told the House Appropriations Committee the other day that "higher yield" nuclear devices would not be tested at the present site in Nevada, because Las Vegas "is just too close."

"Seismic effects, of course," said Seaborg, adding with a grin: "As congressman Morris says, it will shake up the dice on the table and destroy the odds. More serious than that, it shakes the buildings and so forth and could lead to unsafe conditions. We are looking at test sites in alternative places."

AMERICANA

Students of history, railroad buffs, teachers, writers and others will find the eleventh edition of the "Railroad Film Directory", released recently by the Association of American Railroads to be of extraordinary interest. The Director is a guide to more than 345 films and slide-films owned by or relating to the American railroads.

There are films for child and adult entertainment, films on safety, films on freight handling -- one is even based on the ever-popular children's classic about "The Little Engine That Could."

These films are far more than a dry documentary of an industry. One is entitled "The Great Train Robbery", the famous pioneer film production by Edison in 1903. Others have to do with the Civil War period, the opening of the West, Indian ceremonials, inventions in America's growth, the loggin railroads of the West, iron ore from Labrador, tomorrow' railroading, etc., through an almost endless list.

The "Railroad Film Directory" is in effect a directory of American folklore. This is logical, since the rails have been and are the backbone of the American transportation system, and during most of the life of the nation have been closely associated with the important events that have shaped American history. The story of the railroads is the story of the United States.

A gang from the office had stopped by for a few drinks after work. As the evening wore on, one young executive glanced at his watch and started to leave.

"Hey, Joe," the others yelled, "you're not going already?"

"No," said Joe. "I'm just going down to miss my last train, I'll be right back."

Doc. Duncan Says

We have said it once, now we repeat it.

If our lawmakers have the power to declare war (they do) then it's crystal clear to all, they also have the power to prevent undeclared war at anytime. This being the case, then the full responsibility for this destructive war in the far east rests on their shoulders. Said war being sparked by a clash of so called religeon 10,-000 miles from home.

H. L. Hunt Says

HONOR GUARD FOR FREEDOM

Adoption of a constitutional amendment to reform the Electoral College by establishing the Congressional District Plan of choosing presidential electors would have the important effect of doing away with the "straw man" status that such electors now occupy. They would be men and women of prestige in their districts, known to the voters and influential with them.

Their high caliber would make them useful in many capacities during the presidential campaign. But their value to the nation would not end when they cast their votes, each as the representative of the people of his district, for President and Vice President. The formation of 538 electors and 538 runners-up, probably of equal stature with the winners, into a Former Nominees of Presidential Elector Committee would establish an honor guard for liberty.

Their study of urgent government problems and recommendations for their solution could be a vital force for preservation of the Republic. They would form a body of proven competence upon which the President could call for counsel. There is no question that the Former Nominees of Presidential Elector Committee would have vastly more influence than committees so frequently organized to pursue one side of a given subject of national concern.

The contemplation of this potentially great committee is fairly dependent upon an amendment to the U. S. Constitution under which each congressional district would choose one presidential elector and each state in an election at large would choose two electors. Resolutions proposing such an amendment are now before Congress. Congressional approval would be in the public interest. HLH

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

INSIDE REUTHER'S STRATEGY

Story Behind the Coming War on the Auto-Labor Front.

DETROIT - There are men here - and they do not count themselves greybeards - who recall when union brother fought union brother with metal chains and iron bars and in last resort hammered away with their fists. They moved on each other in long auto caravans and disciplined platoon-sized gangs.

They fought for jurisdiction over skilled jobs in the big factories here and up the line in city after city. It may come to this soon enough.

This is the story to watch as Walter Reuther and the automobile company executives on or about July 10, begin their triennial ritual when they run the gamut and the gauntlet before the TV cameras and begin formal renogotiations of contracts which expire Sept. 6.

There will be a long siege and splashing headlines and much shuttling between this car city and the national capital. Eloquently Reuther will denounce the corporate leaders in the class struggle vituperation that everyone expects. That's tradition. He will demand much. That's tradition.

But the key phrase in the key issue in all the jousting with the corporate men who have developed a new eloquence of their own will be something new to the public. Mark it well. It's "contracting out."

Before the final struggle is over late this year, Reuther and his colleagues will make that phrase as famous a household word as their "guaranteed annual wage."

"Contracting out" merely is the corporate practice of calling in outside contractors to supply skilled labor for some task such as carpentering, electrical work, honing up some machines or building some new structures. The outsiders are union men. But they don't belong to Reuther's United Auto Workers. They are members of the AFL-CIO building and construction trades unions whose leaders Reuther has been berating for years.

Now, says Reuther, who is co-chairman of the UAW's Skilled Trades Dept. (some 200,000 strong), this must stop if there are auto union men available and willing to do the work inside the plant. This involves tens of thousands of jobs and hundreds of millions of dollars.

The companies have said, in effect, that contracting out really is no business of the auto union. It's a management right, the executives argue.

But the federal courts have ruled that the companies must bargain with the auto union over such practices - call it contracting out or sub-contracting. This decision came down last February in a case involving General Motors' effort to change operations at its South Gate, Calif., plant. A shift in operations affected six jobs. The men were given other work. But the union sued, saying that the company had to negotiate with it anyway merely on principle - even if no one was laid off at the moment. And the union won. So Reuther and his colleagues will go into negotiations soon and demand that before there is contracting out, the work must be offered to UAW men who are on layoff, on shorter hours or have not been offered the work.

There are other demands involving sub-contracting. But essentially the union wants control of the work and the jobs. The new technology and "computerology," says the auto union, is wiping out jobs and what is left should go to the auto union members.

And the UAW wants a joint labor-management committee to decide such issues. Furthermore, the union demands that future contracts shall give the UAW skilled tradesmen the "right to strike" when necessary to enforce their position on contracting out.

Management is not about to dash out to buy pens for the signing of such a pact. The companies know they will have to give skilled workers a bigger raise than the other hourly rated employes. This will make it more costly to repair and extend or maintain plants. And it will be more and more desirable to put in new automation and computer operations - as well as to contract out.

Eventually there will be a showdown. The companies will insist on their rights to bring in contractors. The auto union skilled workers are of such a mood they will picket.

The outside construction trades unionists, who have the Teamsters with them, aren't often deterred by "enemy" picket lines. It will be a noisy show.

But it is coming. Just look behind the rhetoric.

MALDEN -- Arched brass candelabra holding white tapers, flanked by spiral candelabra, and bouquets of white gladioli, stock and pompons with a background of potted palms formed the setting for the double ring marriage ceremony of Miss Sharon Jean Farr and John David Telker.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Farr and Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Telker.

Dr. C. H. McClure performed the wedding ceremony at 7 p.m. May 26, at the First Southern Baptist church. During the ceremony the couple lit their white anniversary candle at a small table, covered with a white linen cloth, and knelt on a white prie dieu as "The Lord's Prayer" was sung.

Mrs. Hutson Green, organist, played the traditional wedding music and accompanied Mrs. Harold Towery as she sang "Whither Thou Goest" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bridal aisle was entered through a brass archway, topped with a white dove, and flanked by arrangements of greenery. The bride and her father, who gave her in marriage, walked down the aisle.

She wore a gown of white lace designed with a natural waistline, a scooped neckline edged in points of lace, and elbow - length sleeves. The bouffant skirt of silk organiza formed a bustle effect in the back with a bow from which fell a full, chapel train. A forward headpiece of a bow trimmed in lace held secure her four tiered elbow - length veil of bridal illusion. White peau de soie shoes completed her attire and her only jewelry was a diamond pendant, a gift of the groom. The bridal bouquet was a cascade arrangement of two white orchids surrounded by feathered mums and lily of the valley with a shower of satin ribbon.

Paul R. Telker of Kirkwood, brother of the groom, served as best man. Ushers and candlelighters were Joe Lynn Radican of St. Louis and Joe J. Taylor of Caruthersville.

Little Miss Greta Kitrel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Kitrel, was flower girl and wore a short dress of apple green overlaid with white lace and a small white flowered hat. She carried a basket of white asters.

Roger and Robby Telker of Kirkwood, nephews of the groom carried the rings on white satin pillows decorated with white doves.

Mrs. Farr chose for her daughter's wedding a two piece suit of beige knit with a beige and white diamond - check jacket and beige accessories. Her hat was of pink flowers and green chiffon and her corsage was a green cymbidum orchid. Mrs. Telker, mother of the groom, wore a green silk shantung suit with a matching flower hat and black patent accessories. A cream symbidium orchid formed her corsage.

The reception was held in the educational building of the church. The bride's table was covered with a white cloth over-skirted with net with white satin runners trimmed with daisies. A square, three-tiered wedding cake topped with fresh daisies and a tiny bluebird, with swans holding the columns, centered the table flanked by crystal candelabra and white tapers. Bouquets of pink carnations graced the reception room. Mrs. C. R. Davis Jr., and Mrs. Otto Green were in charge of the arrangements. Miss Sandra Hinson, cousin of the bride, presided at the punch bowl and Miss Rita Cude of Blackwood, Ark., and Miss Martha Lamar of Gideon served the cake. Miss Judy Hinson, cousin of the bride, was in charge of the guest book. The registry table held a white bird cage, trimmed with pink and white flowers, with a white dove.

The rehearsal dinner was held on Thursday night at Woody's Restaurant with Mr. and Mrs. Telker, parents of the groom, as hosts.

For traveling, the bride changed to a pink linen A-line dress with white accessories and the white orchid corsage from her bridal bouquet.

The bride graduated from Malden high school and from Arkansas State University, Jonesboro, Ark., and has been employed as a teacher at the Fox high school in Arnold.

The groom also graduated from Malden high school and from Southeast Missouri State College, Cape Girardeau and was employed as a mathematic teacher at the Sikeston junior high school during the 1965-66 term.

He is serving in the army at the Pentagon in Washington, D.C. The couple is living at 1220 N. Quins Street, Arlington, Va.

Out of town guests attending the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. Telker and sons, Kirkwood; Mrs. Opal Book, Mrs. Lucille Graham, Chicago, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fender, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Farr and Patty, Kennett; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Telker, Charleston; Mr. and Mrs. August Telker, Joe Lynn Radican, St. Louis; Mrs. Pauline Lockaby, Dexter; Mrs. Harley Lamar, Miss Martha Lamar, Gideon; Mr. and Mrs. Melford Dailey, Way Cross, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Phillips, Arnold; Miss Rita Cude and Miss Mary Cude, Blackwood, Ark.; and Joe J. Detroit's Kaline Injured

Giants Blank Cards, Reds Lose

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

St. Louis, was blanked 6-0 by San Francisco's Mike McCormick, but stayed on top by 3½ games in the National League pennant chase as runner-up Cincinnati also lost.

The Cards had McCormick in trouble only in the fourth. He scattered seven hits and didn't walk a man. Hal Lanier greeted Cardinal relief pitcher Ron Willis with a bases-loaded double in the fifth to break it open. Lou Brock and Orlando Cepeda had two hits each for St. Louis.

The first act proved more profitable. At least several of the Pirates earned $100 each for it. They didn't get anything for the second act except a lot of confusion and a 5-2 loss to the New York Mets.

In the pre-game festivities, the Pirates and Mets acted out a triple play for a scene in the move, "The Odd Couple," which stars Matthau as a sloppy sports writer and Lemmon as his roommate who is obsessed with cleanliness.

In the scene, Bill Mazeroski—subbing for Roberto Clemente who rejected the $100 role—hits into the triple play.

In the game, the bizarre festivities centered around the part of the Pirate line-up that followed Mazeroski, the No. 5 hitter in the batting order.

In less zany National League games Atlanta clobbered Houston 13-5, Los Angeles whipped Cincinnati 9-0 and Philadelphia stopped Chicago 4-2.

The odd incident in the Pirate-Met game came in the third inning after Jose Pagan cut the New York lead to 5-2 with a two-run double. As Jim Pagliarone stepped into the batter's box, Mets Manager Wes Westrum emerged from the dugout.

"That man batted out of turn," Westrum told plate umpire Al Barlick.

"He did?" Barlick asked, somewhat surprised.

"Yes," Westrum coolly replied.

Indeed Pagan had batted out of turn. So had Gene Alley, who preceded Pagan with the second out in the inning.

As the puzzle became unraveled, the participants learned that in the official line-up handed Barlick and Westrum before the game, Pagan was listed as the sixth batter and Alley the seventh. But in the line-up listed on the scoreboard, Alley was No. 6 and Pagan No. 7.

And, unfortunately for the Pirates, they were following the scoreboard even though the correct, official line-up was posted in their dugout.

How did the scoreboard happen to be wrong? It seems a Pirate broadcaster asked Walker before the game for his line-up, and Walker reeled off—as it turned out, incorrectly—a batting order with Pagan following Alley.

"There were six million people asking me for my line-up," Walker said afterward. "I'll never give it out that way again."

The broadcaster, in the course of conversation, relayed the line-up to the man responsible for putting it on the scoreboard. So there it was.

Met coach Sheriff Robinson caught the discrepancy, but Westrum let it go through the first two innings when the reversal of Alley and Pagan did the Mets no harm.

The turn of events enabled the Mets to hold onto the victory behind a four-run first-inning outburst, capped by Ron Swoboda's three-run homer.

Hank Aaron smashed his 19th and 20th homers, a grand slam and a two-run blast, for Atlanta. Houston starter Wade Blasingame, a Brave until recently, walked three men before Aaron connected in the third.

Don Sutton set down Cincinnati on two hits and received solid support from batterymate John Roseboro, who drove in four runs with a pair of doubles.

The Phillies snapped Chicago's winning streak at seven games. Don Lock's three-run homer in the third did the heavy damage to the Cubs, and Rick Wise stymied them on three hits before needing relief help from Dick Hall in the seventh.

Yastrezemski had the sniffles today after returning to the Boston Red Sox' lineup in Tuesday night's 3-2 victory over Minnesota. But Al Kaline and Frank Robinson, the other two-thirds of the AL All-Star outfield, were far less fortunate.

Kaline, Detroit's injury-prone superstar, all but knocked himself out of the July 11 classic when he broke his right hand in a rare fit of temper during the slumping Tigers' 0-1 loss to Cleveland.

In Tuesday night's other AL games the Washington Senators drubbed California 9-4 and the New York Yankees edged Kansas City 2-1 after losing their doubleheader opener 10-2.

Kaline, struck out by Cleveland's Sam McDowell in the sixth inning, returned to the dugout and slammed his bat into the bat rack, fracturing a metacarpal bone in his hand. He'll be out two or three weeks, according to Dr. Russell Wright, the Tigers' physician. Detroit's month-long slump, dampened Tiger hopes for their first pennant since 1945.

Bi-State Turnpike Discussion Slated

TOPEKA (AP) — Interstate cooperation in constructing a Missouri River crossing to connect a proposed Kansas Mid-Continent International toll road with a Missouri route to the Kansas City, Mo., airport will be discussed Thursday.

John D. Montgomery, Kansas highway director, said Tuesday he will meet with the chairman of the Missouri Highway Commission, Jack Stapleton, in Kansas City.

The Kansas toll road would link Johnson County, Kansas City, Kan., and Leavenworth with the Mid-Continent Airport connection.

Foreign visitors from less highly industrialized countries are often bemused by the mechanization found in everyday American life. In New York, for example, an Indian exchange student was fascinated by doors that open and close automatically when a beam of light is obstructed.

But, after watching for a while, she was less impressed. "At home in Madras," she said, "we are getting exactly the same effect with a small boy working the door." Robert Trumbull

If You Were the Judge

Dentist Not Responsible For Defective Needle

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Barney had a tooth that was deriving him to extraction. But being a coward, by the time he finally got to the dentist it became a major production to pull it out. His whole mouth was tender and sore but it didn't compare to how sore Barney was when the dentist jabbed a needle into his jaw and the needle broke in two. And, if that wasn't enough of a complication, things became even more involved when Barney sued the dentist for the injury to his jaw. It seemed that while the traitorous needle had looked in fine fettle, its medal contained a hidden defect.

"What's he want from me?" queried the tooth driller in court. "I'm only a dentist. It's not my fault I got stuck with a bad needle."

"When a man resorts to a dangerous weapon like a hyporder-mic," retorted Barney, "it's up to him to make sure it's in safe working order. After all, a dentist isn't supposed to just run a filling station. He's supposed to be an expert with his equipment."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the dentist pay for Barney's agony?

This is how the judge ruled: The dentist did not have to pay. The judge held that when a tool breaks as the result of a hidden defect, and through no fault of the user, the user cannot be held responsible for the consequences. In this case, Barney's injury was due to the hidden fault of the needle and not the dentist.

(Based upon a 1967 New Jersey County Court Decision.)

TODAY'S LEGAL POINTER:

If, while driving a car, you see some very young children on the sidewalk, the law requires that you exercise care against their unpredictable acts such as suddenly running into the street. When you see young children, slow down, stay alert and keep an eye on them at all times.

The Prayer
From The Upper Room

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28, 1967

"What shall I do with Jesus who is called Christ." (Matthews 27: 22, RSV)

PRAYER: Forgive me Father, for all my contemplacency. Help me to become so joyfully disturbed by Thee every day that by word or deed I shall speak of Thy love to others. In Christ's name I pray. Amen.

Ann Landers

Wordy Condelences Only Add to Couple's Grief

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the boy whose father died. He wrote to tell you the stupid things people said to his mother at the funeral. I hope some of those ignorant folks will pay attention to his letter and to mine, as well.

Recently we lost our adorable four - year - old daughter. She was retarded, but it didn't matter to us. We loved her just the same. I can count on one hand the people who said, "I am sorry" - - - and let it go at that. Almost every person said, "She is better off - - -" or "It's really a blessing---" or "Now you won't have to worry anymore." One woman suggested that now I could have more free time and could join the garden club.

Please, Ann, tell your readers if they attend the funeral of a retarded or a handicapped child, it isn't necessary to remind the parents that their child was different from other children. A simple "I'm sorry" is enough. ---TEMPLE TEXAS

Dear Temple: Here is your letter and I can add nothing except my thanks to you for writing it. I do hope you understand that these people meant to say something supportive and comforting, but, unfortunately, their remarks were grossly off target.

Dear Ann Landers: I am sitting home alone watching TV, while my husband is at a party. It is quite an affair I am sure, but he forgot to tell me about it until 5:30 tonight when he telephoned to ask me to make sure his suit was ready and his shoes were shined. Of course it was too late for me to get my hair fixed and find a baby-sitter for the children.

This is not the first time he has pulled this stunt and it probably won't be the last. I am a nice looking girl and can carry on a good conversation. If my husband is ashamed of me I can't figure out the reason. I guess he has a better time at parties when he can behave like a bachelor. Will you please tell me what to do about this humiliating situation? -SUB-BASEMENT RULES

Dear Sub: Party invitations are usually sent to the house, addressed to Mr. and Mrs. or if it's a phone invitation, one wife calls the other. I am mystified as to why you learn of these parties at the least moment. Hunt up some sitters who can be called on short notice and don't be so fussy about your hair. The next time he pulls this cutie, get yourself ready and go with him.

Dear Ann Landers: Please say something to people who talk instead of eat. Six of us go out for dinner together a couple of times a week. One woman in the group starts to talk the minute the food arrives and she doesn't touch her plate until everyone else has finished. Then we all have to wait for her to eat her main course before we can get our dessert. She is, unfortunately, a very slow eater. Sometimes we have to wait as long as 30 minutes.

This habit of hers always makes us late for the theater or the card game or whatever we have planned. If you have a cure, please pass it on. -- X. ASPERATED

Dear X.: If no one has told this woman to stop talking and to start eating, someone should. Since your are the one who wrote, I suggest that you be the one to tell her.

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits -- the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Sex -- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self - addressed envelope.

Cave Search Groups Divide $26,300 Fund

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP)— City officials Monday night divided a $26,300 fund among seven groups that participated in the fruitless search for three lost Hannibal boys.

The money went to groups from Hannibal, Desoto, Columbia, Rolla and St. Louis, Quincy, Ill., and Washington, D.C. it was collected by radio station KHMO and businessmen and channeled through the station.

The groups made intensive searches in caves south of Hannibal for the boys, who were last seen May 10. The boys are 14-year-old Edwin Craig Dowell, 13-year-old Joey W. Hoag and his brother, Billy, 11.

All my training and experience before receiving my commission in the Air Force had been in radio, but I was promptly assigned to a job advising men on their government insurance and retirement benefits. So when a colonel from the training group called one day and said, "Lieutenant, I understand you have some radio experience," I proudly told him all about my radio background. When he asked if I was familiar with different types of microphones, I had visions of an important job, probably with the Armed Forces radio network.

"Wonderful," said the voice from the other end of the line. "You're just the man we're looking for. We need someone to call bingo numbers at the officers' club."

Capt. John B. Barnes

Medicaid Bills Go Through

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Senate passed and sent to Gov. Warren E.Hearnes today the welfare-Medicaid bills he recommended.

The bills were approved earlier by the Senate Economics Committee, which determines whether the state can afford such legislation.

Then the major bill was passed 29-3 with little debate. Most of the argument came Tuesday night when the Senate adopted an expanded House version of the bills.

The governor agreed to the expansion after he felt the state had the money to pay for it. The additional funds had been requested especially to take care of medical needs of the poor in the St. Louis and Kansas City metropolitan areas.

With the major bill disposed of the Senate then passed, 31-1, bills expanding medical services for the blind. Blackwell was the only dissenter.

Another of the governor's bills passed and sent to him today was one to extend state aid to kindergartens at an estimated cost of $5,461,000 the first year.

Under the expanded version adopted by the House to implement Title 19 more fully, in patient and out patient hospital and medical services would be provided welfare recipients along with drugs, X-rays and dental care.

The state cost would be an estimated $11.8 million a year, matched by about $17 million in federal funds.

The package includes two bills extending medical care to the blind and raising their pensions from $80 to $85 a month. Their aid would come from the blind pension fund, not the state's general revenue.

While we were in England for a vacation, my brother-in-law, who is also a minister, took over my husband's pulpit and lived in the parsonage during our absence. Upon our return we found this notation taped to the bathroom scales: "Deuteronomy 25:15." Looking it up in the Bible, we read: "But thou shalt have a perfect and just weight, a perfect and just measure shalt thou have: that thy days may be lengthened in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

In Presidents Who Have Known Me, George E. Allen tells about dining at the home of a friend in Bethesda, Md., with a visitor from England. "When darkness came, the Briton was fascinated by the twinkling display asked whether it would be possible to transplant some of them to his place in Surrey. Since nobody at the party was familiar with the requirements of the lightning bug, we referred the Englishman to the Department of Agriculture. There, the next day, after a long junt through endless corridors, he found the office of the department's lightning-bug expert, who gave him a two-hour discourse on the ways of the flashy insect. At the end of the lecture, the visitor thanked the instructor profusely for the enlightenment.

"But you must not thank me," the expert protested. 'Permit me to thank you. I've been here for 35 years studing lightning buys, and this is the first time anybody has ever asked me anything about them."

PLUM TREE

Over the old rock wall the plum tree blooms
Sending a challenge to the wintry skies.
Its ruddy branches bearing pale pink blooms
Recall hopes drifting in an old man's eyes.

I got $2,000 worth of life insurance for only $100. I don't mean $100 a year either!

Dad put my name on a United of Omaha Space Age Security Plan. He bought me $2,000 worth of life insurance for only $100. And, believe it or not, that's all he'll ever have to pay. My insurance is good until I'm 23. Then I take over. I can convert it and get up to $10,000 worth of coverage, without a physical exam.

Sound good? Talk to your Dad. Ask him to call his friendly representative for Mutual of Omaha and Mutual's life insurance affiliate, United of Omaha.

What an unexciting summer! Here I am suppose to be writing an interesting and chatty little column and absolutely nothing interesting and chatty has happened. I think right about now would be a good time to take a vacation. Remember me? This is the summer that I was going to relax in, well it has turned out just like all the others, with one exception. Not only have the kids been sick but this year I've even managed a little of that myself. Then true to form, I ended up on that inevitable committee, and I forget my kids were old enough to learn swimming and that meant more taxi service; also, my calender is swamped with summer birthdays which must be recognized, and I give up. In other words, this summer is half way gone, and I haven't even had time to catch my second breath, much less relax!

I wonder if people with full time help really know how good they've got it? Course, I forgot I have to write this column once a week and the local news (and by the way, why has no one been calling me?) every day and it's no wonder I'm pooped. The next time they ask for volunteers for the space program, I'm going to request the moon mission. It looks so quiet up there. Oh my, another crisis, my youngest is having a tantrum (a loud one in case you're interested), because his brother is riding his bicycle in the street and I won't give the little one permission to join him on his trike. It would be so peaceful if I'd just say yes, but I'd sure hate to have to replace him! Well, I can take strong action, either that or large ear plugs, is definitely being called for, so if you'll pardon me people, I must go and make like that age-old villian, the mother.

DAEOC Plans Its Future

PORTAGEVILLE -- Twenty-three neighborhood service center coordinators of a six-county area met in the Delta Area Economics Opportunity Corporation office Wednesday to discuss projects for the coming year.

The coordinators were asked to submit suggestions to Clyde Jenking, component analyst.

A. W. Wright, elected executive director of DAEOC, spoke.

Also on the program were Cecil Lemonds, DAEOC assistant director; Robert Kearbey, fiscal officer; J. T. Holder, NSC cosupervisor; Chip Schmerbauch, NSC cosupervisor; Alex Cooper, Neighborhood Youth Corps director, and Allene McCaskill, thrift shop supervisor.

Cooper explained that he hoped to be able to place one boy or one girl in each center through efforts of the Neighborhood Youth corporation.

Mrs. McCaskill reported that the thrift shop will be continued through the neighborhood service centers beginning July 1. Four persons over 50 years of age will be hired in each center to help mend and sew clothing for the impoverished.

Coordinators attending the meeting were Mona Innis, New Madrid; Margie Riddick, North Pemiscot; Marge Keen, Hayti-Deering; Marie Ross, Caruthersville; Sarah Bradford, South Pemiscot; Nell Pesnell, Holcomb; Roberta Davidson, Pinhook-Dorena; Lillie Tatum, Anniston-East Prairie-Dogwood.

Legislature Votes Pay Increase

JEFFERSON CITY -- Five months after the "monster" was chopped into pieces by the Missouri House, one of its three parts came alive.

Last week the House, which earlier had broken the Senate's so-called "monster" salary bill into three smaller bills, passed the one designed to raise state officials' salaries.

Original salary proposals were part of a Senate bill introduced in January. But the bill, nicknamed the "monster" because it included provisions for legislative, judicial and state official pay raises within its unwieldy confines, was broken up into legislative, judicial and state official proposals.

Under the plan sent to the Governor on a 98-48 House vote, salaries for six officeholders would be increased. The governor would get $37,500 instead of his present $25,000. Secretary of state, treasurer and auditor would get $5,000 raises, for salaries of $20,000. The attorney general will receive $25,000 and his job will be made full time. The lieutenant governor's pay will jump from $12,000 to $16,000.

The legislative part of the monster, amended by the Senate and near final voting in the House, shows every sign of reviving. It would set pay at $7,200 per year instead of the current $4,800. There is some doubt that judicial raises, which must be passed by the House and sent to the Senate will complete that route before the end of the session.

When asked about the number of salary- raise proposals, Rep. Richard Rabbit, majority floor leader, said it is not unusual. He said such proposals are made every year. But he noted that they have not been granted for seven years and therefore chances for passage were good. "With the inflationary trend, coupled with the raise not going into effedt until 1969, I think the bills are reasonable," he added.

Missouri's proposed pay hikes will put her about midway in salaries paid to state officials. She will be among the leaders in salaries paid to governors. According to 1965 figures, Hearnes' $37,500 would make him sixth highest paid governor. New York's Gov. John Rockefeller is the current leader, at $50,000 per year. California's governor is a not-so-close second with $44,100. Arkansas pays the least, with a $10,000 figure.

When analyzing legislative earnings it is more accurate to figure in per diem and living expenses with salary. According to 1965 figures, for the two-year session, Missouri legislators earned an average of $11,550, placing them tenth among states. If the current legislative bill is passed their standing will, of course, increase.

Last on the legislative list is New Hampshire. There, legislators earn $200 a year. The figure was set in their state constitution and those fellows haven't had a raise since that time - 1889.

Hiring practices for summer jobs in the Highway Department have recently come under fire from state Republican leaders. They have charged that hiring has become a matter of political patronage in which job applicants must be cleared through Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' office before being selected.

Republican State Chairman Dorman L. Steelman of Salem said a study of 392 referrals to the Hignway Department for summer work showed 269 Democrats, 39 Republicans and 65 whose political affiliation was unknown.

Earlier the House had created a special committee to investigate the possibility of discrimination in the hiring practices, but that was before the political furor and the committee's focus was essentially racial. When Republicans suggested that the committee could also investigate political discrimination, chairman John Conley, D-St. Louis, balked. Plans to call Floyd Warmann, the governor's patronage assistant, were cancelled.

"Is there someone perhaps behind the scenes who is trying to choke off further investigation: If so, who?" House Minority Leader R. J. (Bus) King, R-Clayton, wondered.

His question remains unanswered and Warmann remains uncalled.

The House passed and sent to the Governor recently, a bill that would allow St. Louis county residents to vote on whether to put the non-partisan court plan in effect. In the plan, now being used in St. Louis and Kansas City, certain judges do not run for their posts as such. Instead, they first are appointed by a non-partisan commission. After a trial period voters decided if they are to be retained.

An amendment by Sen. William Waters, D-Liberty, would have given a similar right to residents of Clay County. It was withdrawn when it appeared to endanger passage of the St. Louis County proposal.

Opponents of the bill argued that the bill did not remove the judges from public pressure. Instead, it put judges under bar association politics instead of letting the voters elect them. Opponents felt that, like legislators, a judge-s decision was a matter of opinion and ought to be subject to review by the people. Proponents said the plan takes the politics out of the courts and makes the judges more independent and produces better qualified men on the bench. They argued that a judge is not subject to the people's review in the same way as is a legislator. The legislator represents the people, the judge solves disputes among people.

Migrants May Continue in High School

WARDELL -- The Missouri Associated Migrant Opportunity Services is recruiting for a high school equivalency program for the sons and daughters of migrant and seasonal farm workers.

Applicants must be between the ages of 17 and 22. They must have completed the eighth grade, and they must be from low-income families.

Purpose of the program is to prepare students to pass the high school equivalency examination. Students will study at different colleges and universities throughout the country. They will receive free room and board, books, medical and dental examinations, transportation to and from home, plus a trip home for Christmas.

Students will receive $10 a week allowance while in the program. They will learn about different kinds of training available which may interest them, including data processing, automechanics, aircraft mechanics, flying, general business and draft technology.

Anyone interested in this program should contact Martin Blank at the MAMOS Office in Wardell, immediately. The telephone number is MA 8-3453.

NEW YORK (AP) - Molly Picon and Godfrey Cambridge have been signed to star in "How To Be a Jewish Mother," a comedy scheduled for Broadway next season.

The play, based upon a best-selling book by Dan Greenberg, is to precede Rialto arrival with a three-month tour of Philadelphia, Boston, Detroit, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Cleveland and Baltimore.

Rehabilitation Has Its Inning at State Pen

JEFFERSON CITY -- On the high bluffs overlooking the Missouri River, golfers in Bermuda shorts and T shirts queue up to play and intricate, 18-hole miniature course. Near by, tables buzz with games of checkers and pinochle. From handball courts comes the hollow thunk of ball against board. The country-club atmosphere is deceptive -- and was planned that way as a part of a wall-to-wall overhaul that in two years has transformed the Missouri State Penitentiary at Jefferson City from what a visitor once termed a "loathsome stone purgatory" into one of the nation's model prisons.

For most of its 132 years, the Missouri poky resembled a Dickensian choky. Though custody was lax for the favored few who had money or political pull, most inmates lived in nightmarish squalor. At one time the prison held close to twice as many as it was supposed to, with many 12-ft by 9-ft. cubicles sleeping seven or more. Maggots and rats infested the food-handling areas. Gambling, homosexuality and use of drugs were rife, and as a result of their stay in "Jeff City," many convicts were more intractable when they left prison than when they went in.

A series of bloody riots in 1954 left seven convicts dead, injured scores of others, and cost $10 million in damage to buildings and equipment -- but did little to awaken the state government. In 1964, after 16 months of internal warfare among rival convict factions had killed seven men and hospitalized 205 others, the then Governor, John Dalton, sent in investigators to determine what had gone wrong. Nearly everything had. One day after a legislative committee issued a scathing report on conditions in the penitentiary, the warden shot himself. The state director of corrections left soon after, to be succeeded by Fred Wilkinson, 59, former deputy director of the federal Bureau of Prisons and the first professional penologist ever to run the sprawling (seven institutions 3,476 inmates(Missouri system.

Wilkinson and his new warden, Harold Swenson, 58, a longtime associate in the federal system, quickly established a new climate. Knives and forks -- hitherto forbidden as potentially dangerous weapons -- joined spoons on the dining tables; fresh fruit appeared on the breakfast menu; shower rooms were placed at the end of each cell-block tier so that convicts could bathe daily instead of twice a week. Cheap transistor radios were put on sale. For the first time, maximum - security prisons were allowed outdoors for recreation and supplied with pillows and mattresses instead of back-breaking straw ticks.

A burned-out cell block, still standing a decade after the riots, was replaced by a prisoner-built recreation building that has become the home of the Versatiles, an eight-man convict combo that perform at schools and other state institutions. Most important, the prison population has been reduced by 20%. Yet a truly professional administration also has its stern side. Guards, who had often snoozed in overstuffed chairs in the watchtowers, were now perched on high aluminum chairs and provided with M-1 carbines and sawedoff 12-gauge shotguns in place of puhy .22-cal. rifles. Many of the old-timers -- moonlighting farmers, bellhops and taxi drivers -- were replaced with younger, more competent men.

The real purpose of a prison, in Wilkinson's view, is not to keep prisoners happy -- or even to keep them in -- but to rehabilitate them. Everyone who can works at Missouri, and training and educational programs are being given top priority. Despite the reduced population, more inmates (710) are enrolled in rehabilitation programs now than ever before. The idea, of course, is to teach prisoners useful occupations, in the hope that most will never again see the inside of "Jeff City."

Reserve Drill Duty Revised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon announced Tuesday that military Reservists who have served two years active duty generally will now be exempt from having to make weekly drills in the Ready Reserve.

The new policy may mean the release of thousands of men currently required to attend weekly meetings of Active Reserve or National Guard units.

The Pentagon said that "In no event shall a man who has served in Viet Nam be involuntarily assigned" to a Ready Reserve unit for weekly drill purposes.

The Army estimated there are 25,000 individuals mandatorily attached to Ready Reserve units who will be eligible for release, if they so desire, by Dec. 1.

Unspecified numbers of Navy and Air Force Reservists also are involved.

The policy was laid down in a memorandum to the services by Deputy Secretary of Defense Cyrus Vance.

GO TO CHURCH SUNDAY

Pope Paul Revives Permanent Deacon Rank

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI today revived the permanent rank of ordained deacon in the Roman Catholic Church for both married and single men to help meet a shortage of priests.

In a document titled "Sacrum Diaconatus Ordinem" — the Sacred Order of the Diaconate, the pontiff carried out another major recommendation of the 1962-65 Vatican Ecumenical Council. It urged creation of permanent deacons to help in areas where priests are scarce.

The document was issued four days after a papal encyclical reaffirming the requirement that priests be celibate and rejecting demands that they be allowed to marry.

The deacons will be ordained ministers who can preach and confer some sacraments but not say Mass or hear confession, which only priests can do.

Those eligible for the permanent diaconate will be married men at least 35 years old, provided they have the consent of their wives, and single men at least 25 years old who must remain single after becoming deacons.

Establishment of the permanent diaconate in each nation will be left to the discretion of the national bishops conferences. Latin America, Africa and Asia, where the priest shortage is greatest, are expected to make the widest use of the new diaconate.

In recent centuries seminarians have been made sub-deacons and then deacons during the last few months before their ordination to the priesthood. The diaconate rank has been temporary, allowing the advanced seminarian to baptize, preach and give Communion.

Section of River Traffic Reopens

ST. LOUIS (AP)— The Coast Guard announced today a 35-mile section of the Missouri River from Waverly to Miami, Mo., was again open to traffic.

Travel is still restricted on the flood-swollen river below Miami, but a Coast Guard spokesman said additional reaches of the river will be reopened as soon as practicable.

The travel restriction was imposed more than a week ago because of high water conditions on the river. It was feared waves created by river craft might damage levees holding back the rampaging river.

The Coast Guard said the section of river was re-opened Monday night on the recommendation of Army engineers at Kansas City.

Spanish Fair Pavilion Ground-Breaking Set

ST. LOUIS (AP)— A ground-breaking ceremony to reconstruct the Spanish World's Fair pavilion in St. Louis will be held Friday.

Spokesmen for the fund-raising committee for the pavilion said about $1 million has been donated, but another $1.6 million is needed to finish the reconstruction work and equip the building.

The pavilion was given to St. Louis by the government of Spain after the New York World's Fair. It will be located north of Busch Memorial Stadium in downtown St. Louis.

The Lingering Shadow: The Warren Report ... And It's Critics

EDITOR'S NOTE— The defendant is a book. So is the prosecutor. On trial is the Warren Commission Report, indicted by men whose own books find it guilty. Guilty of haste. Guilty of bias. Guilty of a coverup. But neither critic nor commission is the jury. The public is. It, ultimately, will find where it thinks truth lies. But before considering its verdict, the public must ask for the facts. All the facts. Has it heard them? All of them?

By BERNARD GAVZER and SID MOODY
AP NEWSFEATURES WRITERS

PROLOGUE

The one stain has not died. Doubt will not let him.

Doubt asks: "How did you fall? By whose hand?" Doubt has heard an answer— "Lee Harvey Oswald did it"— from doctors, lawyers, government; from police, friends, foe.

But doubt does not believe. Not quite.

Doubt knows the stature of the seven somber men of the Warren Commission, the breadth of their investigation, the depth of their report. But doubt is not appeased. Not quite.

Doubt has heard of the rifle, the shells, the fingerprints, the handwriting, the blunted bullets, the people who said they saw. But doubt is not assured. Not quite.

Why is this so?

Because doubt was denied the certainty of a trial. Because not all is known. Because not all is answered and may never be. And because there have been other seekers than the commission. They have seen what the commission did not see: different shots from different places; shots where the commission saw none; design where the commission saw chance; doubt where the commission saw fact.

Are these seekers scavengers, as Texas Gov. John B. Connally has called them? Or are they impassioned skeptics, refusing to take "it is most likely" for an answer? Are they creators of doubt? Or are they creatures of it? It is not always clear.

But if the Warren report is now doubted by many, it is be cause of the books written by these few seekers. If their number is small, their impact is not. The very existence of a printed page has an aura of authenticity above and beyond what it states. As the critics' books are increasingly read, they are increasingly believed. It is far easier to read one book from a shelf by a single critic than a whole shelf of books by a commission. So doubt takes root. The shelf lies fallow.

One could protest the whole argument is macabre— ghoulish. John F. Kennedy is gone. Talk won't bring him home. But this was a president. The people he led have a right— nay, an obligation— to know what struck him down, and why. It was not just a death in the hearts of the nation. It was murder at the heart of the national structure. Assassination unsolved is assassination at large, possibly free to strike again, certainly free to poison and corrode by suspicion, mistrust, fear.

Soit is not mere curiosity, not just to add a footnote to history, to ask who killed Kennedy. To preserve the absolutely vital trust of the people in their leaders and institutions, the question must be answered. And stay answered.

The quest may be long. It is still asked: Who killed Lincoln? John Wilkes Booth is not the answer to all seekers. Nor is Lee Harvey Oswald. Lincoln, however, is for the archivist. The wound from Dallas is still red. It is tender to questions of who, or why. It may ever be.

Or, perhaps, the wound may have been salved all along. Perhaps the first investigation need be the last.

Or, perhaps, the pain of doubt may throb the less if one were to ask the doubters of their proof, ask of the askers: What have you found, what news can you bring us?

THE COMMISSION

The critics of the Warren Commission Report have made grave charges. They have made uncertainty. They have made money.

Have they made a case?

Have they proved that the most extensive murder investigation in the nation's history, directed by some of its foremost citizens, was wrong, dead wrong? Was the commission guilty of haste, of bias, of a cover-up and Lee Harvey Oswald innocent of murder? Do events such as those recently in New Orleans indicate justice has not been done?

Polls suggest increasing numbers of people think so.

Book after carefully footnoted book say so. The Warren Report was once on the best-seller lists. Now Mark Lane's "Rush to Judgment" is.

Which has spoken truth? The critics say they have. And the commission has stood mute.

Lee Sauvage Mark Lane Edward Epstein

Mark Lane has said: "As long as we rely for information upon men blinded by the fear of what they might see, the precedent of the Warren Commission Report will continue to imperil the life of the law and dishonor those who wrote it little more than those who praise it."

And the commission has stood mute.

Leo Sauvage, in "The Oswald Affair," has said: "It is logically untenable, legally indefensible and morally inadmissable to declare Lee Harvey Oswald the assassin of President Kennedy."

And the commission has stood mute.

Edward Jay Epstein, in "Inquest," has said: "the conclusions of the Warren report must be viewed as expressions of political truth."

And the commission has stood mute.

It considered its first words, published in 27 volumes in the fall of 1964, to be its last. It has disbanded.

The public, in the jury box, may wonder at the commission's work. But it must also ask after the critics', Is it true where the commission's is not? Are the critics innocent of the guilt they charge the commission: of distortion, sly selection of convenient facts, editing of truth?

Mark Lane wrote that the commission "cited evidence out of context, ignored and reshaped evidence and— which is worse— oversimplified evidence."

Did he?

Lane and the other critics have produced little in the way of new evidence. What they have done is use what the commission provides in its 26 volumes of testimony and exhibits — but to different conclusions. The critics' case rests on the same bedrock as the commission's— the Warren report.

How have the critics used, or abused, it?

On page 199 of the hardcover edition of "Rush to Judgment" Lane mentions an Illinois ballistics expert, Joseph D. Nicol. Nicol testified before the commission on Oswald's pistol, the shells found at the scene of the slaying of officer J. D. Tippitt and bullets recovered from Tippitt's body.

Lane says Nicol "appeared less than certain" the shells he came from Oswald's gun. There is a footnote in the passage referring to Volume III of the hearings, Page 511. Few readers have the volumes much less the time to check Lane's thousands of citations. A pity.

On Page 511, Volume III Nicol is asked by commission counsel Melvin Eisenberg if he was "certain in your own mind of the identification" of the shells.

Nicol replied: "Yes; the marks on the firing pin particularly were very definitive. Apparently this firing pin had been subjected to some rather severe abuse, and there were numerous small and large striations which could be matched up very easily."

Yet Lane says Joseph D. Nicol appeared "less than certain."

In his book Epstein questions the commission's conclusion that Oswald was a good shot. He mentions the shot at Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker which missed. He mentions the testimony of Nelson Delgado, a fellow Marine who had watched Oswald on the firing line. Oswald, Delgado testified, got a lot of "Maggie's drawers"— complete misses.

Delgado said something else. On the rifle range he said Oswald "didn't give a darn. He just qualified. (He) wasn't hardly going to expert himself."

And Walker himself testified that his assailant "could have made a very good shot and just by chance (the bullet) hit the woodwork (of a window). There was enough deflection in it to miss me."

Don't these passages have some bearing on Oswald's marksmanship? Epstein evidently didn't think so. They don't appear in his book.

Lane devotes several pages to the testimony of a former Dallas patrolman, Napoleon J. Daniels, who said he saw a man resembling Jack Ruby enter police headquarters just before he shot Oswald. Lane takes to sue with the commission for deciding Daniels' testimony "merits little credence."

But nowhere does Lane mention that Daniels was given a lie detector test. Daniels was asked if he had told the complete truth. He said yes. He was asked if he had deliberately made up any of his story. He answered no. The lie detector indicated both responses were "false." He was asked if he thought the person he saw enter the building was Jack Ruby. He said no. The test indicated this response was "true."

Is such evidence relevant to why the commission felt Daniels merited little credence? Lane evidently thought not.

One of Epstein's major points concerns the report of the autopsy on Kennedy. It concluded he had been shot in the back of the neck and the back of the head. An FBI report submitted Dec. 9, 1963 contradicted the doctors in several important areas. Epstein makes much of the difference.

Inquiry by the writers, however, has established that the FBI wrote its original report before getting that of the doctors, which reached the agency Dec. 23, 1963. The FBI nonetheless stuck to its original version in a supplemental report Jan. 13, 1964. The agency felt duty bound not to alter a report by its agents— its customary policy— even though other reports might contain other facts.

It was the commission's task to choose between the FBI agents— who never reported what they had overheard the autopsy doctors say— and the doctors themselves who were making the one authorized examination and full report. It chose the doctors.

Shouldn't a critical appraisal of the commission have made such an inquiry? If Epstein did, it is not recorded.

Such lapses of the critics do not prove or disprove that Oswald murdered. But do these lapses, and many others to be cited later, have some bearing on the objectivity the critics claim for themselves and deny the commission?

Did the critics, not the commission, "cite evidence out of context, ignore and reshape evidence?"

They did.

They have sat in judgment of the Warren Commission and found it wanting. But they are not judges. They have been prosecutors, making a case. Where fact has served, they have used it. Where it has not, they have not.

If they have read all the evidence, they have not quoted it all. They have taken evidence to form theories, to launch speculation. But they have not taken all the evidence.

They have said "perhaps" and "it seems" and "it is likely." But they must say more. They must say here is the evidence. And as yet, such evidence has not been forthcoming.

The thing of the Warren report is that it is based on the same evidence as the books that attack it. The commission provided in the 26 volumes of testimony and exhibits and additional matter in the National Archives the results of its investigation. And this is the heart of the critics' case. Their witness were the commission's. Their evidence was the commission's. But, again, not all of it.

A doctor said Kennedy was shot from the front. A man saw a puff of smoke from some trees ahead of the motorcade. The man, and others who saw smoke, were commission witnesses. The doctor, and others who thought Kennedy's throat wound was one of entrance, were commission witnesses. And they appear for the critics.

But not always in the critics' books does one read of the people who saw a rifle in the window of the Texas School Book Depository. Not always does one read the doctors' testimony that

"The staff was instructed to proceed in each instance on the possibility that Oswald was not involved. If they didn't want to proceed on that basis, the commission didn't want them to continue."

One lawyer, Wesley J. Liebeler, talked of Oswald as a marksman. "I took the position that you, well, you couldn't tell. The evidence that Oswald was able to shoot the President was that he did, he was lucky. Oswald had something in his sights that he knew he was never going to have again. I suspect he was up for it."

Liebeler talked of the "grassy knoll" where Lane and others think shots came from, in part because people ran in that direction after the gunfire.

"Would people do this? Would you if you knew or thought someone was firing from there? It depends upon instantaneous reaction. I might run after the motorcade, I might run for cover. But I'm sure most people would run to get out of the way."

Joe Ball, another staff member, talked of the rifle found on the sixth floor of the depository building which police first identified as a Mauser. Later it was determined to be a Mannlicher-Carcano, an Italian weapon. Critics have implied this switch suggests the weapon was planted.

"Evidence shows that Seymour Weitzman (who found the rifle) never handled it and saw it from five feet away. Weitzman and Deputy Sheriff Eugene Boone both testified it seemed them to be a Mauser.

"Let's make it clear, it IS a Mauser, it is built on German patents and the Mauser refers to the bolt action. But Lane never dares to go so far as to say that Weitzman or Boone in any way suggest this is not the gun which was found on the sixth floor and which has been found beyond all doubt to have fired the bullets."

(This is not quite accurate. Lane, on Page 120 of the hardcover edition of "Rush to Judgment" writes: "Boone, unlike Weitzman, was shown the Mannlicher-Carcano which he was unable to identify as the weapon Weitzman had found.")

Boone said no such thing. He was shown the rifle and testified: "It looks like the same rifle. I have no way of being positive."

And why wasn't he positive? Because he said he never handled the rifle.)

Ball talked of Epstein.

"He said I said Norman Redlich (one of the staff) used 'a turgid law review style.' I wrote on Epstein's publisher and said I never used the word 'turgid' in my life. I had to go the dictionary and look it up.

"His statement that the lawyers worked as part-time consultants is a lie. I made my residence in Washington, D.C., permanently from January to July 1964. I was allowed to come to my home in Long Beach, Calif., once a month, and I did. Epstein quotes me 39 times and I didn't talk to that man for over half an hour and that was in a New York hotel lobby."

Nine of the 10 staff members quoted by Epstein that these writers interviewed charge him with misstatements. Several of them wrote letters of protest to his professor for whom he wrote what became "Inquest" as a master's thesis. The professor replied to one that "experience has shown that all too often when a person is shown his own words on paper he is inclined to state that he did not make those remarks."

Experience showed this in Epstein's case, anyway.

Liebeler talked of finger and palm prints.

Oswald's palm print found on the rifle had little probative value, said Lane, "especially since local and federal police officials who issued inaccurate statements...were alone with Oswald and the weapon." The implication seems obvious.

"Well," said Liebeler, "we had to consider that in view of the performance of the Dallas Police Department, God rest their souls, were they so devilishly clever that they could have taken Oswald's print and planted it on the rifle and then lifted it again, or that they could have handed the rifle to Oswald to get the print? Of course, that would involve the judgment of Oswald, and do you think any one could have gotten Oswald to touch that rifle with a 10-foot pole? Of course not."

(Lane also suggests it is "curious" that a Dallas police officer found a print on the rifle and "lifted" it off the weapon and that an FBI expert was unable to find any trace of the print on the gun several days later. The reader might also find it curious that Lane does not mention that subsequent FBI photographs of the lifted print showed minute gaps. They exactly matched nicks and pits in the metal of the rifle from which the print was taken.)

Another staff member talked of Lane's book.

"He attempts to discredit the commission on hundreds of counts and to suggest such an enormous level of incompetence or dishonesty as to make his entire argument ridiculous. Had someone set out to design a commission of the incompetence Lane attributes to it, I doubt very seriously that it could ever have been done. Had he focused upon some weaknesses of the commission or the report, he might had had an area of argument."

And the staff agrees there were weaknesses. Some were of omission: the commission most certainly could have called to testify witnesses who had only given statements to law officials. Some weaknesses were of commission: the report could easily have been more explicit about autopsy conflict. Some were inevitable: no one will ever be able to say with absolute certainty which bullet produced the fragments that were found in Kennedy's car or just what struck a bystander in the cheek or why Oswald did it or even, perhaps, if he did it unaided.

But to read the report, all of it, is to appreciate the depth of the investigation. Perhaps the commission should have had its own investigatory staff, regardless of the huge expense. But that is to suggest that the FBI and the Secret Service and other investigative agencies on which it relied were somehow not to be trusted.

Some critics suggest that they were not trustworthy: either subconsciously they sought to defend their professionalism by charitably treating evidence and witnesses or, far worse, they were involved in a superb plot, if the latter were the case, it would mean, because of the intricacy and range of the investigation, a conspiracy of almost universal dimensions. As yet, there is no such evidence.

The report volumes themselves are as irritating things. The first 15 are testimony, most of it taken by the commission staff. The remaining 11, which lamentably have no central index, are as dilly packed as a beatnik's duffle bag. There is little or no order. A search for a specific statement or affidavit can take hours. One of the intense coterie of assassination buffs, Sylvia Meagher, has made an index on her own. But it, too, is fallible.

Yet the volumes, particularly the testimony, have a certain fascination. The range of characters is Tolstoyan. There is the President of the United States, the secretary of state. And a prostitute. There is a dashing, Russian-born oil man who knew both Oswald and Jacqueline Kennedy and whose amatory troubles with a Latin beauty are truly comic. And there is a laborer who told the august members of the commission in blunt terms of the locker room what he thought when he heard a rifle shot above his head in the depository building.

The critics are equally diverse. There is Harold Weisberg, a Maryland poultryman who was once National Barbeque King and claims his "Geese for Peace" campaign got the Peace Corps its first good publicity break. Weisberg, who knows the report as an evangelical knows his Bible, has published two books, "Whitewash" and Whitewash II", is planning a third and thinks there were two Oswalds, one a look-alike, stand-in.

Sauvage, a French journalist, argues with Gallic logic, no index and membership in the "perhaps" and "it seems" school. He raises some pointed questions in areas where uncertainty is and may remain forever.

Epstein makes much of the doctor-FBI autopsy discrepancy. It is answerable. He makes a criticism of many of the commission's methods. This is arguable. Both ways. But he raises his questions from facts in the commission volumes. Sometimes not all the facts. And sometimes not facts at all.

Lane's book is a pyrotechnic. He has made a movie based on his book and given lectures here and abroad. At the very end of his book he files a disclaimer exempting why he accepted material contrary to the commission's conclusions and rejected material that supports it. So, of almost his last page, Lane identifies himself: he is a prosecutor, suing the defendant commission's own witnesses and testimony. But not all of it.

"I haven't found anything of theirs that even makes a positive contribution," said one of the senior commission counsels or the critics.

One can assume the commission staff would stand by its work. Its statements should be considered with that in mind. One, however, should approach the critics with similar disposition. Read them. But read what they criticize as well. If it is ironic that the report is their target, it is also convenient. One can read and compare.

Epstein presumably read. He found the commission had used "political truth." It sought to dispel rumor and keep America clean, not to determine fact. But neither Edward Jay Epstein nor Earl Warren is the jury. The public is. And there is a borer who told the august members of the commission in blunt terms of the locker room what he thought when he heard a rifle shot above his head in the depository building.

The critics are equally diverse. There is Harold Weisberg, a Maryland poultryman who was once National Barbeque King and claims his "Geese for Peace" campaign got the Peace Corps its first good publicity break. Surtax Holds No Guarantee

NEW YORK (AP) — A tax surcharge, which the head of the Federal Reserve Board suggested this week is the main need of the economy, could turn out to mean more economic headaches—and less revenue than is hoped for.

This is a tricky measure. Expert as the tax technicians may be in this era of the manipulated economy, they cannot foresee all the consequences of the surtax plan. This probably explains the hesitancy in putting the plan into action.

It was first proposed by the administration early this year as a six per cent surcharge on all corporate and personal income taxes—in effect a tax on your taxes. The reasoning behind the proposal was that a vigorous 1967 economy would need a restraining influence.

It is being advocated now—by William McChesney Martin, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board—as a revenue builder that might help offset a deficit in government financing and lessen the threat of inflation.

But the 1967 economy has not been as strong as anticipated, even though Martin referred to "the recovery under way." A surtax could shrink the tax base by slowing business. And if the base shrinks, so will the revenue produced from it.

Problems such as this are what lead to recurring opinions that the Johnson administration has few options. The needle on the compass points to some unpleasant weather in any direction.

As Martin indicated, the big problem is the government's big deficit, estimated at somewhere between $13.5 billion and $29.2 billion and which, in some ways, is a contradiction to other federal policies.

For example, both the Johnson administration and the Federal Reserve have been using all their efforts this year to make credit more easily available and at lower rates. The reason: to prod the economy.

However, not all interest rates have gone down. Long-term rates— the charges on loans for periods of many years—actually have risen, and now some business loans are being made at record-high charges.

The fear now is that these high interest rates may develop also in consumer loans and in the home-mortgage market. This would abort completely the Federal Reserve's easy-money policy, which already has been less than successful.

As Martin indicated, the contradictory behavior of interest rates is based on a fear of the big government deficit, a deficit that means the government will have to borrow money.

When the government goes into the market for huge sums of money, it can cause additional upward pressure on interest rates. Some corporate treasurers, therefore, are borrowing now in advance of requirements to avoid a future shortage or higher rates.

Water Standards Set on 34 Streams

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The State Water Pollution Board announced today it has set water quality standards on 34 interstate streams.

The drainage areas cover about two-thirds of the state.

Federal approval of the standards is expected by October. The federal water pollution control administration already has commented favorably on the standards.

The state board has established 149 monitoring stations to check water quality and detect any changes.

Sources of pollution on the Missouri River are expected to be cleaned up by the end of 1968 and those on the Mississippi by March 1, 1969.

Water standards are expected to be set up for other streams in the state by the end of this year after further public hearings.

Matthews CWF Officers Installed

MATTHEWS - "Thy Will Be Done" was the theme of the candlelight installation of officers when the Christian Women's Fellowship met at the church Wednesday evening.

A three-dimensional picture of "Rock of Ages" flanked by a single white taper and a seven-branch candelabrum at the altar formed the worship center.

Installed as officers, with Mrs. Bob Greene presiding, were: President, Mrs. Lester King; vice president, Mrs. Nelson Lumsden; secretary, Mrs. William Depro; treasurer, Mrs. Dennis Parsons; worship director, Mrs. Larry Long; study director, Mrs. M. H. Radcliffe; and service director, Mrs. Carl Romines.

The mission study, "Money Is as Money Does" presented by Mrs. M. H. Radcliffe was introduced with a money tree from which each member picked a quotation for a group discussion on the way Christians should regard the use of money.

During the business session the tentative date for the annual ice cream social was set at August 5, with a committee appointed to complete plans. Refreshments were served during the social hour by the hostess, Mrs. Carl Romines.

A program on civil defense was presented by James Hahs Jr. of Sikeston when the Matthews Community Club met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. W. H. Gilmer Sr.

Hahs, who has worked 14 years with the Sikeston organization, explained the need for organization at the local level to meet the emergency needs in time of disaster and the facilities now available in the area.

Mrs. Carl Romines reported on a recent meeting of committees of the Community Club and Volunteer Firemen on community projects of mutual interest. Tentative date for the annual fall festival is September 15.

The group voted to combine the July and August meetings. The program on safety will be presented by Mrs. Bob Greene and Mrs. Jerry Hester. It will be preceded by a family picnic supper on Sunday evening, July 23, at 6:30 p.m. at the community center. Each family is to bring tableware for family and guests.

Refreshments were served by the hostess during the social hour.

Dr. Theodore Wesley Roberts, who will complete his internship this month in a Louisville, Ky., hospital, will report to Brooks air force base at San Antonio, Tex., for a two-year assignment on August 9. Dr. Roberts will be in charge of the instrumentation division in aerial space. He and Mrs. Roberts and son, Teddy, expect to spend the month of July here with their mothers, Mrs. Fern Roberts and Mrs. Cora Bye and families.

Mr. and Mrs. Herschel Yates returned last week from a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Yates and daughter, Natasha, at Boston, Mass., and Marshall Yates in Washington, D.C. The family enjoyed together a sightseeing trip to points of interest in New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine. They also visited in Niagara Falls, Canada; Salem, Mass.; Lincoln Center and St. Patrick's cathedral in New York; and a Boston Pops symphony concert.

Mr. and Mrs. B.B. Conrad attended the Don J. Brewer appreciation Day at Risco, June 18. The program patterned after the TV program, "This Is Your Life," was arranged by civic and service clubs of the community on the retrement of Brewer, high school principal, who had taught 40 years in the Risco schools.

The volunteer firemen had as guests at a fish fry and barbequed chicken supper at the community center Thursday evening their wives and children. Sixty persons were present to enjoy the culinary efforts of the men.

Mr. and Mrs. Darrell Gaines of Columbus were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Reed and Mr. and Mrs. James Clayton.

Mrs. Cyrus Sides of Bernie and Mr. and Mrs. Roy K. Stanley returned last week from a visit with relatives in Houston, Tex.

Mrs. Larry Long has been confined to her home this week with the mumps.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester King and family are visiting this weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Bill King and son, Kerry Wayne, in Wapella, Ill.

Miss Louanna Sutton, Bill Reid and Charles Conrad are attending summer term at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau.

MRS. FRANK BOWMAN, route one, Dexter, places a casserole in the oven to bake.

Mrs. Frank Bowman Collects Recipes, Teaches Class

Editor's Note: This is the 43rd in a series of articles about the home life of Sikeston area families.

By RUTH DILLENDER

DEXTER -- Mrs. Lynda Bowman, route one, says that she enjoys collecting recipes of all kinds.

Mrs. Bowman and her husband, Frank, have two sons, Michael Dennis, five years old, and Mark Allen, 16 months old. The couple has lived in Dexter about six and a half years.

Mrs. Bowman is a native of Poplar Bluff.

The family attends the Southwest Church of the Nazarene, where Mrs. Bowman teaches a junior high Sunday School class and is a member of the prayer and fasting league. She helped decorate for a banquet that honored high school and college graduates of the church.

Bowman is a driver for the United Parcel Service in Sikeston. He bowls and has won second place in a 50-game bowlathon.

Treasures in the Bowman home are an antique French telephone and a silver tea service, given to Mrs. Bowman by her husband.

Mrs. Bowman is Dexter reporter for the Sikeston Daily Standard.

Recipes that she suggests are:

ITALIAN SPAGHETTI

Tomato sauce:

Saute one onion in oil, with one or two cloves garlic, minced. Add one pound ground beef and brown. Add one tablespoon parsley, one teaspoon basil leaves, one half teaspoon oregano, one half teaspoon Italian seasoning, one teaspoon sugar, and salt and pepper to taste.

Add one eight-ounce can tomato sauce, one no. 2 can tomatoes, that have been chopped up with fork, one can mushrooms (stems and pieces) and one quart tomato juice.

Serve over cooked spaghetti.

LASAGNE

Make spaghetti sauce. Meanwhile cook about 12 lasagne noodles according to directions on package. Drain.

Place the ingredients in layers in 9 by 13-inch baking dish, in order listed, beginning and ending with sauce. Repeat until all ingredients are used. There should be about four layers:

Sauce, single layer of noodles, mixture of 3/4 pound ricotta cheese, 1 tablespoon minched parsley, one teaspoon oregano, 3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese and 3/4 pound grated Mozarella cheese.

Cottage cheese may be substituted for ricotta cheese.

CHICKEN-BROCCOLI CASSEROLE

4 chicken breasts with skins removed

1 package frozen broccoli

1 can chicken broth plus two chicken bouillion cubes

Buttered bread crumbs

Crumbled American cheese

Salt and pepper chicken breasts. Roll in flour and brown on both sides in oil, about four to five minutes on each side. Cook broccoli as directed on package.

Arrange chicken in baking dish and top with cooked broccoli. Pour chicken broth in skillet in which chicken has been browned. Season to taste.

Thicken with flour and milk mixture. Pour over chicken and broccoli. Top with bread crumbs and crumbled cheese. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake covered for 40 minutes at 350 degrees. Uncover and bake 10 additional minutes.

CEDRIC'S CASSEROLE

Saute one medium onion, chopped, in three tablespoons butter. Add one pound ground beef, salt and pepper to taste, heating through but not browning. Spread three cups coarsely shredded cabbage in two-quart baking dish. Cover with meat mixture and top with two more cups shredded cabbage.

WACKY CHOCOLATE CAKE

Combine:

2 cups sugar

12 tablespoons Wesson oil

Add:

2 tablespoons vinegar

1 tablespoon vanilla

Sift together:

3 cups flour

4 tablespoons cocoa

1 tablespoons salt

2 teaspoons soda

Add to mixture alternately with 2 cups cool water. Add one fluid ounce of red food color. Batter will be thin.

Pour into greased and floured cake pans and bake at 350 degrees until done. This recipe makes a two layer cake.

PURE BUTTER ICING

1½ cups milk

¼ cup flour

Cream:

1 cup sugar

1 cup pure butter

1 teaspoons vanilla

Beat until fluffy and add cooled flour and milk mixture. Beat until fluffy. Ices two layer cake.

A sailor who limped into the Naval dispensary had his foot X-rayed and was asked to wait for the results. A while later a corpsman appeared and handed the sailor a large pill. Just then a mother with a child in need of immediate attention entered. After the corpsman disappeared with the new patient, the sailor hobbled over to the drinking fountain, swallowed the pill and sat down to wait. Some time later the corpsman reappeared, carrying a bucket of water. "Okay," he said. "Let's drop the pill in this bucket and soak that foot."

Dead Fish Still Mystery At Dexter

DEXTER -- All fishermen and fish experts who have their own pet theories about what happened to the hundreds of fish that died in the Dexter lake can now continue to speculate, because the mystery remains.

Tests, made by experts from the fisheries research laboratory of the Missouri department of conservation show that the tests "were negative for the presence of toxic organic compounds".

In other words, there was no poison in the lake to kill them, according to the letter received late last week by Mayor Willis Conner from James R. Whitley, supervisor of the water quality investigations for the state agency.

Biologist Tom Russell of the fisheries laboratory made the tests, taking samples of the water from the lake here to his offices in Jefferson City where the scientific investigation was made.

Approximately 5,000 pounds of fish, the vast majority of which were described by Dexter Water Superintendent O. D. Hill as Hickory Shad, died in the 12-acre lake several days ago. They were "scooped out" by city crews and buried.

And so -- the mystery remains, and there are numerous theories as to what caused the fish to die. But all are pure speculation.

No more fish have died in the lake, and everything at the fishing area "seems to be normal", city officials pointed out.

The letter from Whitley said that "laboratory biossay tests have been completed on the water samples collected from your city lake by biologist Tom Russell. Tests were negative for the presence of toxic organic compounds. The water was more alkaline than usual. This condition may be related in some way to treatment of the new well. The water sample collected directly from the well after pumping for 48 hours was normal."

"It is often difficult", the letter continued "to determine the exact cause of fish mortality unless chemical determinations and examinations of fish can be made at the time the fish are dying".

"I hope you have no further problems in your fishing lake", the letter concluded.

Mayor Conner had requested that the Missouri Department of Conservation make the tests after the fish were found dead.

The book contains descriptions of 24 playwrights whose works were produced by the Theater Guild of which Langner was a co-founder. Miss Marshall said release of the material had been delayed because she felt another Langner work, "G.B.S. and the Lunatic" was published too soon after her husband's death in 1962.

Construction Wonders Of America

"THE ARSENAL OF DEMOCRACY"

As Adolf Hitler in the late 1930s took over most of the European continent piece by piece and the Allies' capacity for defeating him seemed to become less and less, a majority of American citizens were not neutral in thought--even though they had to be in action.

Finally, at the opening of the new session of Congress in 1941, President Roosevelt issued a clarion call for altering our neutrality posture and making America "the arsenal of democracy." Two months later, a still reluctant Congress made the all-important concession: It modified the neutrality law of the land to permit the belligerents to obtain war materials from the United States on a "cash and carry" basis.

Passage of "Lend Lease" was followed by an appropriation of $7,000,000,000 -- later increased by another $6,000,000,000. Britain and France promptly took advantage of the new law by placing large orders with American firms. Soon, 6,000,000 workers had been added to the nation's payrolls for the greatest production upsurge that the country had ever seen.

Under the stimulus of war orders and an urge to ready ourselves for our own upcoming survival struggle, American industry -- with a tremendous assist from construction men -- planned for and then produced the "45,000 tanks and 60,000 planes in 1942" and "75,000 tanks and 125,000 planes in 1943" set as a target by President Roosevelt shortly after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

This was indeed an American "wonder" -- along with the courage of 12,000,000 U. S. servicemen and women quickly readied for action on two fronts -- which Hitler and the Japanese warlords failed utterly to consider as possible, and which eventually brought them to complete defeat.

(To Be Continued.)

Although it boosts my spirits
When they tell me I'm a wit. . .
Sometimes I wonder whether
They mean only half of it.

Snow White Robin In Springfield Yard

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. AP - At first the Homer L. Manleys thought they had a young dove in their backyard. Then they saw another robin feeding the snow white bird in the midst of several normal baby robins.

The clincher was when the family dog chased the bird, and it chirped like a robin.

The Manleys say the bird seems friendlier than other wild birds and is easy to approach. The National Geographic Society says this may be because albinos have weak eyes.

Albino birds are usually shunned by their fellow, the Society says.

So as the Manleys' albino grows older, it will probably be driven from feeding and nesting places.

Lurleen Wallace Faces Surgery

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - Gov. Lurleen Wallace of Alabama says she has a malignancy which may require surgery again.

The nation's only woman governor said she would enter M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston, Tex., next week on the recommendation of her doctors. The hospital is noted for its treatment and study of cancer.

Her husband, former Gov. George C. Wallace, is expected to be a third-party candidate for president next year.

Eighteen months ago, Mrs. Wallace underwent a hysterectomy for what was described as an early malignant tumor of the uterus.

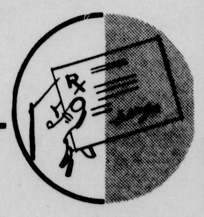
BETWEEN THE APOTHECARY AND TODAY'S PHARMACIST

Pharmacists are now authorities on thousands of modern drugs that were unknown in grandfather's day



When you consider the countless thousands of drugs that have been discovered since penicillin, the vast difference between today's modern pharmacy and the pothecary shop of long ago is sharply pointed up.

Today's druggist not only compounds and fills prescriptions - as a recognized authority on drugs, their uses and effects, he also dispenses the many new miracle medicines that banish pain and often saves lives.

Hearnes Praises Work of Cooperative

Gov. Warren E. Hearnes praising the Scott - New Madrid - Mississippi Electric Cooperative for its work over the past quarter century to bring rural Missouri out of the darkness.

He spoke at the 30th annual meeting of the organization at the armory.

The governor arrived at the airport at 1:45 p.m., after being delayed by high water at the Jefferson City airport for more than an hour. He was introduced by Harry C. Blanton. He spoke to more than 1,200 persons.

In his praise of the rural electric cooperative, he quoted to an editorial by his friend, Charley Blanton, saying, "it is the editor's belief that the rural areas of the United States would still be in darkness without competent, efficient and popular operations of the Rural Electric Administration. The Scott-New Madrid - Mississippi Cooperative, which operates in our territory, has done a magnificent job in bringing light and power to the farmers and its maintenance and service has not to my knowledge, received a single complaint."

An electric freezer was won by Joe Wade, Oran, and an air-conditioner by D. P. Pruett, Sikeston rural.

At a board meeting held at the cooperatives office building officers were re-elected. They were Ernest Moxley, Charleston, president; Earl Weeks, Bell City, vice - president; Alwin Gasser, Sikeston, secretary-treasurer; Gordon Stroud, Matthews, assistant secretary, and James Stephenson, secretary.

Hearnes said that the state's toll road needs were immediate.

"Our present system of highways is now three years behind on its program," he said. "If the people will approve the new roads they will be able to travel in safety over four lanes and after they are paid for can be leased to the state highway department for maintenance. A new program would spread over the entire state thereby bringing our roads up-to-date with neighboring states. The toll roads are my dreams to make Missouri a better state, and all my efforts will be used to bring this about."

James C. Stephenson, secretary of the cooperative, presided. He announced in his annual report that there was six per cent increase in overhead expenses, which was a little greater than the growth of kilowatt sales.

"We have changed Howardville and Haywood City over to our town home rate in place of the farm - home rate. We have used up six months of our advance money, called cushion of credit in Washington, to bridge the gap. The Vietnam war is causing the advance government payments to be held back, unless they are absolutely needed.

"Today our cooperative has a larger construction crew than any one of its size. In 1966, 200 poles were changed, and more than 800 bad poles were replaced. We will no longer qualify for any two per cent money. If the 90th congress passes the federal electric bank for loans, we will be able to borrow at going rates.

"The idea of the electric cooperative way is sound, and our organization is healthy. The response of the people is worth more than words in benefits from the REA, which has a duty to provide electricity at a price the members can afford to pay."

EAST PRAIRIE -- In a light turnout yesterday voters approved renewal of the Associated Natural Gas Company's franchise to supply natural gas to the city, 52-1.

Grand Jury to Probe

Powell's Records

WASHINGTON (AP)— A federal grand jury wants a look at Adam Clayton Powell's expense records as part of its probe of the elected but unseated congressman's affairs.

Powell, a Democrat from Harlem, was excluded from the House at the start of the current session because of alleged financial misconduct.

The grand jury's request for travel vouchers and telephone costs of Powell and his staff was revealed Tuesday when the House clerk and sergeant-at-arms said they have been subpoenaed to bring the records to a grand jury session Aug. 7 in Washington and the House gave its required approval.

Unaligned Ask Troop Withdrawal

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)— The nonaligned members of the United Nations agreed today on a resolution calling for the immediate withdrawal of Israeli troops from Arab territory.

They authorized the group chairman, Yugoslav Ambassador Danilo Lekic, to present the proposal to the emergency session of the General Assembly later in the day.

Morris Enters Race Again

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Lewis E. Morris of Jefferson City, a pharmaceutical engineer, filed today for the Democratic nomination for treasurer in the 1968 primary.

Morris regularly runs for high public office and just as frequently loses. He lost to M. E. Morris in the 1964 primary.

William Robinson of Jefferson City announced Tuesday his resignation as president of Frontier Tower Life Insurance Co. He said he wanted to devote more time to public office but reports have been growing he wants to seek the Democratic nomination for treasurer.

In Missouri the treasurer cannot succeed himself. M. E. Morris has been switching from the appointive office of state revenue director to the elective office of treasurer and back every four years since 1945.

Pope Confers New Cardinals

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI conferred red birettas on 24 new cardinals in the Sistine Chapel tonight and said he would give greater power than ever to the princes of the Roman Catholic Church.

Speaking in Latin at the consistory ceremony, the Pope rejected any notion that the College of Cardinals was outdated and would eventually be replaced by the new synod of bishops. The synod will meet for the first time in September at the Vatican.

Pope Paul placed a red hat on each of the new cardinals as they kneeled below Michelangelo's famed murals in the richly frescoed chapel.

Kroger Store to Close

The Kroger Co., 205 West Malone, will close Saturday. The building will be used by Two Tony's Smorgasbord.

A representative of the Memphis division of Kroger Company confirmed today that the store will close. No immediate plans for opening another store were announced.

Kroger officials expressed the opinion that another store may be opened later.

On April 14, it was announced that the restaurant would be built on the old south grade school lot in the 300 block of West Malone. The initial announcement called for a building to seat 800 persons.

Jarvis said today that the owners decided to utilize the Kroger building to open for business sooner. An addition to the building is being constructed but the seating capacity is expected to be between 450 and 500.

Remodeling of the interior is planned, and the owners hope to open for business between Aug. 15 and Sept. 1.

The latest in kitchen equipment for fast service will be installed. The dining area will be carpeted.

The outside of the building will be sandblasted to improve the appearance, Foder said.

A 35 by 60 feet addition is being constructed at the rear of the present building to house the kitchen. Overall the building will be 160 by 60 feet.

Two banquet rooms will be enclosed.

Waitresses will dress in Swedish costumes.

House Delays Remap Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House sent a proposed congressional redistricting bill back to a House-Senate conference today to try to work out another approach.

The rejected bill, which would have postponed state action to equalize districts until 1972, had aroused widespread confusion among members. Most of them saw it in print only shortly before they were expected to vote on it.

With the house about to shut down for a 10-day holiday recess, no action will be taken for at least two weeks.

The decision to return the bill to conference was reached after members flooded house leaders with private protests and there were strong indications it might be defeated on the floor. The action was taken by unanimous consent without debate.

Conferences between House and Senate on different versions of the same legislation generally end in a compromise somewhere in the middle. But the redistricting bill adopted in conference took a different course.

By its terms it provides that no state would be required to redistrict in accordance with the Supreme Court's one man one vote mandate until after a federal census. The next regular census will be taken in 1970.

One of many questions raging unanswered through the House Tuesday was the effect the proposal would have on lower courts, which have been moving vigorously to enforce the Supreme Court ruling.

"If this means the courts shall do nothing until 1972," said Rep John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., "then it amounts to a postponement of a constitutional right and Congress can't do that by simple statute.

"If it is just advisory and the courts can go ahead as they have, then it is meaningless." Conyers was the only House member of the conference committee to vote against the bill, which is a compromise of sorts between different measures passed by the House and Senate. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was the only Senate conferee to dissent.

Reading Program to Begin

The summer reading program at the public library will be conducted each Monday from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. in July.

All children up to junior high school age are invited to take part to learn about the pioneer days from such books as "Pioneer Traders," "Over the Mormon Trail," "Pigtail Pioneers," "Wilderness Journey," "The Trail to Santa Fe," "Holding the Fort with Daniel Boone," "The Cabin Faced West," "Prairie School," "Crazy Horse: Sioux Warrior," "Davy Crockett's Earthquake."

Each week the leader will read parts of the story "The Tree in the Trail" by Holling C. Holling.

Mrs. Frank Sibley will be in charge. Mrs. J. L. Howle's Girl Scout troop will assist.

Police Nab New Madrid Jail Escapee

Glen Ray Richardson, 27, Matthews, was arrested by Sikeston police Tuesday night on Luther Street and is being held for New Madrid county authorities.

Richardson escaped from the New Madrid county jail twice, the last time was about two months ago, police reported. Richardson is charged with auto theft by New Madrid county authorities.

Richardson was arrested in an automobile and had a .38 caliber pistol on his person at the time of arrest, Police Chief Arthur Bruce, one of the arresting officers, said.

About six pocket watches, a suitcase of underwear and about 20 new cartons of 30-30 shells were in the car. Police are investigating to see if the items were stolen.

Gentry Hicks, East St. Louis, Ill., apparently had been in the company of Richardson, police said. Hicks was driving the car Richardson was sitting in at the time of his arrest, police said. Hicks was not in the car when Richardson was arrested. He was stopped later on Petty Street, police reported.

Hicks is wanted for parole violation, police said. He is being transferred to Scott county authorities.

Governor Signs Variety of Bills

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) Gov. Warren E. Hearnes signed a bill Tuesday that will change the school administrative system in St. Louis County, putting the entire responsibility under the supervision of one superintendent instead of four as it is now.

The governor also signed a bill making the closing time of all bars the same throughout the state.

He signed other bills to make it necessary for trucks to cover loose loads, set the fine for overweight trucks at 2 cents per pound, liberalize disability retirement benefits for St. Louis firemen, allow construction of another state office building in Jefferson City and transfer a statue of Gen. John J. Pershing now on the Capitol grounds to Pershing State Park.

Prohibition Party

Convention Opens

DETROIT (AP) — The Prohibition party, losing votes and fights to get on the ballot, opened its national convention a year early today with an attack on demon rum.

"Beverage alcohol must today be recognized as chief cause of poverty, broken homes, juvenile delinquency, vice, crime, political corruption, wasted manpower and highway accidents," the party's proposed platform stated.

Party leaders said they are holding the convention a year in advance of other major political conventions in order to give themselves time to circulate the petitions necessary to put their presidential candidate on the ballots.

Scuffle At Police Station

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick said today that he struck attorney Jim Robinson with his fist Sunday afternoon after Robinson called him "a son of a bitch."

Potashnick said they were arguing about Charlie Williams at the police station when the incident occurred. Williams was arrested Sunday afternoon and charged with first degree murder in connection with the pistol slaying of Joe Lee Matthews, Painton, in Sunset Addition.

Robinson is Williams' attorney. He refused to comment on the incident today.

Potashnick said he frequently had been in heated discussions with attorneys but none before had ever called him such a name.

He commented that he was not proud of the incident but wasn't ashamed of it either.

Toll Road Session

In Rolla Today

Representatives of Sikeston were invited to a meeting at Rolla today to form a concerted effort to assure further action for a north-south toll road in Missouri, Richard Pinkerton, manager of the Chamber of Commerce said today.

No representatives of the city were able to attend, due to previous commitments.

U.S. Urges Israel to Avoid Hasty Action in Jerusalem

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House made a public appeal to Israel today to avoid any quick annexation of the old section of Jerusalem seized from Jordan in the Middle East war.

"The President is confident that the wisdom and good judgment of those now in control of Jerusalem will prevent any such action," the statement said.

The pronouncement came on the heels of word from Jerusalem that the Israelis, in a step toward annexation, had unified municipal services between the sectors of the city.

Assistant press secretary Tom Johnson read the statement which said Johnson "assumes that before any unilateral action is taken on the status of Jerusalem there will be appropriate consultation with religious leaders and others who are deeply concerned."

The city, holy to adherents of three religious faiths, has been a center of conflict repeatedly during the last 20 years, the statement said.

"Men of all religions will agree that we must now do better," it said. "The world must find an answer that is fair and recognized to be fair. That could not be achieved by hasty, unilateral action."

Administration Prodded To Build Missile Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Johnson administration was prodded by House GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford today "to get off dead center and get going" on a thin antiballistic missile defense system for the United States.

"There just doesn't seem to be any choice as far as the United States is concerned," Ford told a news conference. "The Soviet Union is going to build an ABM system. They may be willing to talk but there is no reason why we shouldn't proceed as they are doing. If they will talk, that's all the better."

Ford, a Michigan Republican, took note of Communist China's first hydrogen bomb explosion earlier this month.

"With the United States and the U.S.S.R. standing each other off in nuclear deterrents," he said, "The possession of even one Red Chinese nuclear weapon that can be carried in one conventional bomber radically alters the balance of power in East Asia and the Western Pacific — areas which President Johnson has specifically proclaimed as vital to America's national interest and the fate of the free world."

Ford, in response to questions, said a thin system which would be beamed primarily to protection of Strategic Air Command installations, would cost an estimated $3 billion.

Election Reform Bill Called Curb on Wealthy

WASHINGTON (AP) — An administration spokesman testified today that President Johnson's election reform bill would curb the influence of wealthy individuals, but a senator said it would make "the sky the limit" on campaign spending.

The legislation submitted by the President would remove present ceilings on election expenditures for federal offices while tightening requirements for disclosure of where the money came from and how it was spent.

It would also limit to $5,000 the amount an individual or members of his family could contribute to any candidate's campaign.

Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., the first witness at hearings before the Senate elections subcommittee, agreed that present ceilings on expenditures are wholly unrealistic.

Junior College Aid Increased

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House today gave final approval to a bill increasing state aid to junior colleges. It now goes to the governor.

The state has been paying $240 per student for 30 semester hours of work. Under the new bill the state will increase the amount to $320 for 24 semester hours of work.

More Rain Forecast

KANSAS CITY (AP)— More showers and thunderstorms are predicted for Missouri.

Heavy rains fell Tuesday over the northern and western sections of the state. Falls of 4 inches were reported at Bynumville in Chariton County; 3.2 inches near Fayette in Howard County and 3 inches at Hamden, also in Chariton County. Other reports included: Macon 2.44, Salisbury 2.20, Glasgow 2.09, Moberly 2.05, Madison 2.04 and Mexico 1.89.

July 4th Event in East Prairie

EAST PRAIRIE -- According to Lloyd Hall, president of the Chamber of Commerce, East Prairie will have one of the biggest Fourth of July celebrations in it's history through the cooperation of six civic organizations.

The Lions club is planning a street dance downtown on Main street from 8 p.m. until midnight with the Quotations furnishing the music.

The auxiliary police are sharing the sponsorship of the horse show with the saddle club and will handle the gate and the parking there. They will also handle traffic at the morning parade and for the fireworks show at night.

The day will be climaxed by a free fireworks show at 9 p.m. furnished free by the Chamber of Commerce. Cars will be parked in the H. A. Jones ball park area, near the Lions club building. Fireworks will be fired from an area north of there.

Remap Action Taken

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House version of congressional redistricting passed the Senate Tuesday night 29-3. It now goes to the governor.

The bill puts most of the 70,000 St. Louis negro voters in the 1st District represented now by Democrat Frank M. Karsten. It gives Negroes a chance to elect Missouri's first negro congressman although Karsten is credited with a liberal civil rights voting record.

Sen. Robert A. Young, D-St. Ann, fought the bill bitterly, partly because it puts his airport township in the Republican 2nd District of Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, R-Webster Groves.

Other incumbents were generally undisturbed although the 6th District of Rep. W. R. Hull, D-Weston in northeastern Missouri, represented by Rep. Richard Ichord, D-Houston, would be swing districts in Republican years.

Young argued the reapportionment plan was invalid under a federal court order requiring the legislature to redistrict according to the one man - one vote rule or 1968 congressional candidates would be forced to run at large.

Sen. Omar H. Avery, D-Troy, Senate reapportionment chairman, agreed it was "absolutely ridiculous" to redistrict now on the basis of 1960 census figures when the legislature will have to do the job all over after the 1970 census.

But he said under the court order it had to be done.

Some senators said use of the 1960 figures will make some of the urban districts more malapportioned than they are now.

120 Enrolled in Kiwanis Swimming Program

Three hundred twenty children have enrolled in the Kiwanis club swimming program this summer, Bob Meyer, chairman of the swimming lesson committee, reported at the weekly meeting Tuesday at the Holiday Inn.

Guests attending included Mayor Kendall Sikes, Earl Jarvis, Ernest Elledge and Don Lewis.

Dr. Paul S. Barnett, professor of economics at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau spoke on the great faiths of the American Heritage; faith in God, the individual, and freedom.

Dr. Barnett related that it is not enough to merely assert our faiths.

"We must give them life and meaning, by our works and in our daily lives. The faith of our pioneering ancestors was a living vital force. It was what sustained and guided them as they worked and fought to lay the foundations of a free society.

"To them, faith was a daily source of strength and comfort. It was this which they passed on to their children.

"In the present battle for the minds of men, can we, dare we, do less?" he asked.

Dr. Barnett concluded with a quotation from DeTocqueville when he visited America more than 100 years ago:

"I sought for the greatness and genius of America in her commodious harbors and her ample rivers, and it was not there; in her fertile fields and boundless prairies and it was not there . . .Not until I went to the churches of America and heard her pulpits aflame with righteousness did I understand the secret of her genious and power. America is great because she is good, and if America ever ceases to be good, America will cease to be great."

Powell's Records

WASHINGTON (AP)— A federal grand jury wants a look at Adam Clayton Powell's expense records as part of its probe of the elected but unseated congressman's affairs.

Powell, a Democrat from Harlem, was excluded from the House at the start of the current session because of alleged financial misconduct.

The grand jury's request for travel vouchers and telephone costs of Powell and his staff was revealed Tuesday when the House clerk and sergeant-at-arms said they have been subpoenaed to bring the records to a grand jury session Aug. 7 in Washington and the House gave its required approval.

Morris Enters Race Again

Morris regularly runs for high public office and just as frequently loses. He lost to M. E. Morris in the 1964 primary.

William Robinson of Jefferson City announced Tuesday his resignation as president of Frontier Tower Life Insurance Co. He said he wanted to devote more time to public office but reports have been growing he wants to seek the Democratic nomination for treasurer.

In Missouri the treasurer cannot succeed himself. M. E. Morris has been switching from the appointive office of state revenue director to the elective office of treasurer and back every four years since 1945.

Unaligned Ask TroopWithdrawal

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)— The nonaligned members of the United Nations agreed today on a resolution calling for the immediate withdrawal of Israeli troops from Arab territory.

They authorized the group chairman, Yugoslav Ambassador Danilo Lekic, to present the proposal to the emergency session of the General Assembly later in the day.

Pope Confers New Cardinals

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI conferred red birettas on 24 new cardinals in the Sistine Chapel tonight and said he would give greater power than ever to the princes of the Roman Catholic Church.

Speaking in Latin at the consistory ceremony, the Pope rejected any notion that the College of Cardinals was outdated and would eventually be replaced by the new synod of bishops. The synod will meet for the first time in September at the Vatican.

Pope Paul placed a red hat on each of the new cardinals as they kneeled below Michelangelo's famed murals in the richly frescoed chapel.

Kroger Store to Close

The Kroger Co., 205 West Malone, will close Saturday. The building will be used by Two Tony's Smorgasbord.

A representative of the Memphis division of Kroger Company confirmed today that the store will close. No immediate plans for opening another store were announced.

Kroger officials expressed the opinion that another store may be opened later.

On April 14, it was announced that the restaurant would be built on the old south grade school lot in the 300 block of West Malone. The initial announcement called for a building to seat 800 persons.

Jarvis said today that the owners decided to utilize the Kroger building to open for business sooner. An addition to the building is being constructed but the seating capacity is expected to be between 450 and 500.

Remodeling of the interior is planned, and the owners hope to open for business between Aug. 15 and Sept. 1.

The latest in kitchen equipment for fast service will be installed. The dining area will be carpeted.

The outside of the building will be sandblasted to improve the appearance, Foder said.

A 35 by 60 feet addition is being constructed at the rear of the present building to house the kitchen. Overall the building will be 160 by 60 feet.

Two banquet rooms will be enclosed.

Waitresses will dress in Swedish costumes.

House Delays Remap Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House sent a proposed congressional redistricting bill back to a House-Senate conference today to try to work out another approach.

The rejected bill, which would have postponed state action to equalize districts until 1972, had aroused widespread confusion among members. Most of them saw it in print only shortly before they were expected to vote on it.

With the house about to shut down for a 10-day holiday recess, no action will be taken for at least two weeks.

The decision to return the bill to conference was reached after members flooded house leaders with private protests and there were strong indications it might be defeated on the floor. The action was taken by unanimous consent without debate.

Conferences between House and Senate on different versions of the same legislation generally end in a compromise somewhere in the middle. But the redistricting bill adopted in conference took a different course.

By its terms it provides that no state would be required to redistrict in accordance with the Supreme Court's one man-one vote mandate until after a federal census. The next regular census will be taken in 1970.

One of many questions raging unanswered through the House Tuesday was the effect the proposal would have on lower courts, which have been moving vigorously to enforce the Supreme Court ruling.

"If this means the courts shall do nothing until 1972," said Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., "then it amounts to a postponement of a constitutional right and Congress can't do that by simple statute.

"If it is just advisory and the courts can go ahead as they have, then it is meaningless." Conyers was the only House member of the conference committee to vote against the bill, which is a compromise of sorts between different measures passed by the House and Senate. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., was the only Senate conferee to dissent.

Reading Program to Begin

The summer reading program at the public library will be conducted each Monday from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. in July.

All children up to junior high school age are invited to take part to learn about the pioneer days from such books as "Pioneer Traders," "Over the Mormon Trail," "Pigtail Pioneers," "Wilderness Journey," "The Trail to Santa Fe," "Holding the Fort with Daniel Boone," "The Cabin Faced West," "Prairie School," "Crazy Horse: Sioux Warrior," "Davy Crockett's Earthquake."

Each week the leader will read parts of the story "The Tree in the Trail" by Holling C. Holling.

Mrs. Frank Sibley will be in charge. Mrs. J. L. Howle's Girl Scout troop will assist.

Police Nab New Madrid Jail Escapee

Glen Ray Richardson, 27, Matthews, was arrested by Sikeston police Tuesday night on Luther Street and is being held for New Madrid county authorities.

Richardson escaped from the New Madrid county jail twice, the last time was about two months ago, police reported. Richardson is charged with auto theft by New Madrid county authorities.

Richardson was arrested in an automobile and had a .38 caliber pistol on his person at the time of arrest, Police Chief Arthur Bruce, one of the arresting officers, said.

About six pocket watches, a suitcase of underwear and about 20 new cartons of 30-30 shells were in the car. Police are investigating to see if the items were stolen.

Gentry Hicks, East St. Louis, Ill., apparently had been in the company of Richardson, police said. Hicks was driving the car Richardson was sitting in at the time of his arrest, police said. Hicks was not in the car when Richardson was arrested. He was stopped later on Petty Street, police reported.

Hicks is wanted for parole violation, police said. He is being transferred to Scott county authorities.

Governor Signs Variety of Bills

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) Gov. Warren E. Hearnes signed a bill Tuesday that will change the school administrative system in St. Louis County, putting the entire responsibility under the supervision of one superintendent instead of four as it is now.

The governor also signed a bill making the closing time of all bars the same throughout the state.

He signed other bills to make it necessary for trucks to cover loose loads, set the fine for overweight trucks at 2 cents per pound, liberalize disability retirement benefits for St. Louis firemen, allow construction of another state office building in Jefferson City and transfer a statue of Gen. John J. Pershing now on the Capitol grounds to Pershing State Park.

Prohibition Party

Convention Opens

DETROIT (AP) — The Prohibition party, losing votes and fights to get on the ballot, opened its national convention a year early today with an attack on demon rum.

"Beverage alcohol must today be recognized as chief cause of poverty, broken homes, juvenile delinquency, vice, crime, politcal corruption, wasted manpower and highway accidents," the party's proposed platform stated.

Party leaders said they are holding the convention a year in advance of other major political conventions in order to give themselves time to circulate the petitions necessary to put their presidential candidate on the ballots.

Scuffle At Police Station

Scott County Prosecuting Attorney Fielding Potashnick said today that he struck attorney Jim Robinson with his fist Sunday afternoon after Robinson called him "a son of a bitch."

Potashnick said they were arguing about Charlie Williams at the police station when the incident occurred. Williams was arrested Sunday afternoon and charged with first degree murder in connection with the pistol slaying of Joe Lee Matthews, Painton, in Sunset Addition.

Robinson is Williams' attorney. He refused to comment on the incident today.

Potashnick said he frequently had been in heated discussions with attorneys but none before had ever called him such a name.

He commented that he was not proud of the incident but wasn't ashamed of it either.

Toll Road Session

In Rolla Today

Representatives of Sikeston were invited to a meeting at Rolla today to form a concerted effort to assure further action for a north-south toll road in Missouri, Richard Pinkerton, manager of the Chamber of Commerce said today.

No representatives of the city were able to attend, due to previous commitments.

U.S. Urges Israel to Avoid Hasty Action in Jerusalem

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House made a public appeal to Israel today to avoid any quick annexation of the old section of Jerusalem seized from Jordan in the Middle East war.

"The President is confident that the wisdom and good judgment of those now in control of Jerusalem will prevent any such action," the statement said.

The pronouncement came on the heels of word from Jerusalem that the Israelis, in a step toward annexation, had unified municipal services between the sectors of the city.

Assistant press secretary Tom Johnson read the statement which said Johnson "assumes that before any unilateral action is taken on the status of Jerusalem there will be appropriate consultation with religious leaders and others who are deeply concerned."

The city, holy to adherents of three religious faiths, has been a center of conflict repeatedly during the last 20 years, the statement said.

"Men of all religions will agree that we must now do better," it said. "The world must find an answer that is fair and recognized to be fair. That could not be achieved by hasty, unilateral action."

Administration Prodded To Build Missile Defense

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Johnson administration was prodded by House GOP Leader Gerald R. Ford today "to get off dead center and get going" on a thin antiballistic missile defense system for the United States.

"There just doesn't seem to be any choice as far as the United States is concerned," Ford told a news conference. "The Soviet Union is going to build an ABM system. They may be willing to talk but there is no reason why we shouldn't proceed as they are doing. If they will talk, that's all the better."

Ford, a Michigan Republican, took note of Communist China's first hydrogen bomb explosion earlier this month.

"With the United States and the U.S.S.R. standing each other off in nuclear deterrents," he said, "The possession of even one Red Chinese nuclear weapon that can be carried in one conventional bomber radically alters the balance of power in East Asia and the Western Pacific — areas which President Johnson has specifically proclaimed as vital to America's national interest and the fate of the free world."

Ford, in response to questions, said a thin system which would be beamed primarily to protection of Strategic Air Command installations, would cost an estimated $3 billion.

Election Reform Bill Called Curb on Wealthy

WASHINGTON (AP) — An administration spokesman testified today that President Johnson's election reform bill would curb the influence of wealthy individuals, but a senator said it would make "the sky the limit" on campaign spending.

The legislation submitted by the President would remove present ceilings on election expenditures for federal offices while tightening requirements for disclosure of where the money came from and how it was spent.

It would also limit to $5,000 the amount an individual or members of his family could contribute to any candidate's campaign.

Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., the first witness at hearings before the Senate elections subcommittee, agreed that present ceilings on expenditures are wholly unrealistic.

Junior College Aid Increased

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House today gave final approval to a bill increasing state aid to junior colleges. It now goes to the governor.

The state has been paying $240 per student for 30 semester hours of work. Under the new bill the state will increase the amount to $320 for 24 semes-

Remap Action Taken

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The House version of congressional redistricting passed the Senate Tuesday night 29-3. It now goes to the governor.

The bill puts most of the 70,000 St. Louis negro voters in the 1st District represented now by Democrat Frank M. Karsten. It gives Negroes a chance to elect Missouri's first negro congressman although Karsten is credited with a liberal civil rights voting record.

Sen. Robert A. Young, D-St. Ann, fought the bill bitterly, partly because it puts his airport township in the Republican 2nd District of Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, R-Webster Groves.

Other incumbents were generally undisturbed although the 6th District of Rep. W. R. Hull, D-Weston in northeastern Missouri, represented by Rep. Richard Ichord, D-Houston, would be swing districts in Republican years.

Young argued the reapportionment plan was invalid under a federal court order requiring the legislature to redistrict according to the one man - one vote rule or 1968 congressional candidates would be forced to run at large.

Sen. Omar H. Avery, D-Troy, Senate reapportionment chairman, agreed it was "absolutely ridiculous" to redistrict now on the basis of 1960 census figures when the legislature will have to do the job all over after the 1970 census.

But he said under the court order it had to be done.

Some senators said use of the 1960 figures will make some of the urban districts more malapportioned than they are now.

120 Enrolled in Kiwanis Swimming Program

Three hundred twenty children have enrolled in the Kiwanis club swimming program this summer, Bob Meyer, chairman of the swimming lesson committee, reported at the weekly meeting Tuesday at the Holiday Inn.

Guests attending included Mayor Kendall Sikes, Earl Jarvis, Ernest Elledge and Don Lewis.

Dr. Paul S. Barnett, professor of economics at Southeast Missouri State College in Cape Girardeau spoke on the great faiths of the American Heritage; faith in God, the individual, and freedom.

Dr. Barnett related that it is not enough to merely assert our faiths.

"We must give them life and meaning, by our works and in our daily lives. The faith of our pioneering ancestors was a living vital force. It was what sustained and guided them as they worked and fought to lay the foundations of a free society.

"To them, faith was a daily source of strength and comfort. It was this which they passed or to their children.

"In the present battle for the minds of men, can we, dare we, do less?" he asked.

Dr. Barnett concluded with a quotation from DeTocqueville when he visited America more than 100 years ago;

"I sought for the greatness and genius of America in her commodious harbors and her ample rivers, and it was not there; in her fertile fields and boundless prairies and it was not there . . .Not until I went to the churches of America and heard her pulpits aflame with righteousness did I understand the secret of her genious and power. America is great because she is good, and if America ever ceases to be good, America will cease to be great."

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Improved standards in road edge striping and lane markings may one day save your life - even when you're driving in that huge "traffic snarl" known as New York City.

To give motorists an extra edge of safety, America's first city is decorating 180 miles of limited access highways in the five boroughs. Edge lining and lane marking is expected to improve driving safety during the day and at night.

Using special trucks and reflectorized paint, traffic department crews are spraying a solid white line four inches wide along malls and curbs that divide paved roadways and shoulders of the city's expressways.

A double benefit is gained from the white lines, Henry A. Barnes, traffic commissioner, explained.

Striping the malls and curbing, he said, establishes guide lines to help motorists determine the width of the roadway. Secondly, the striping provides a sharp distinction between the ordinary road surface and the "treated" curbs or shoulders which, at night, glow in a car's headlights. Such edging and striping proves especially valuable as a safety feature at night or during inclement weather.

The painting program, Barnes stated, may well be a perpetual procedure in Manhattan's effort to reduce accidents. When the present program is done, in about one year, another will be started, he said.

Techniques of painting on canvas and on pavement can require a far different brush stroke, as Barnes observed.

Pavement painting, for example, is done in several ways.

Where there is a slanted curb, the curb itself is painted. But a straight curb requires a different technique, in which paint is laid six inches away from the curb. This is designed to prevent drivers from running into or jumping the curb.

When there is no curb, painting is also done six inches in from the edge line to discourage drivers from wandering off the road.

Will New York retain a number one rating in such safety applications? Barnes believes it will, although edge striping and lane marking are becoming common safety features in many cities today.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT

The appearance of Missouri's junior United States Senator, Edward V. Long, at last weekend's annual meeting of the Missouri Cotton Producers Assn. would prompt the conclusion that Bowling Green's most famous citizen does not intend to withdraw from political life at the end of his term in 1968. At least, it can be observed that he does not intend to withdraw voluntarily.

Senator Long's political and legal tribulations are, by now, well known to readers of this newspaper, which has commented on them extensively. The comments are also well known to Senator Long, who observed to a staff member of The Daily Democrat at the MCPA meeting that some of this publication's recent editorials had been less than kind toward him. This is an understatement, but we plead guilty.

We are not, however, guilty of condoning such practices as Senator Long has been following during his Senate career. Nor are we guilty of thinking that Senator Long, despite his close organized labor connections, will be any asset to the Democratic party in 1968.

Next year's election may well prove to be, in Missouri as well as elsewhere, a Republican election year. Whether it is depends in large measure upon the Democrats and upon those party members who are selected in the primaries.

If Missouri Democrats care to renominate Senator Long to head their state ticket in 1968, then we predict that the political careers of a good many Democrats in Jefferson City will be terminated as of January 1, 1969.

We believe it is that serious, and before the Senate Ethics Committee gets through, we believe it will be even worse.

Indeed, if Senator Long is on the ticket, we predict the Democrats of Missouri will be on the short end of the 1968 election totals.

It's as simple as that.

Two major crashes in the same state and a few days apart claimed the lives of eight people and injured two others.

Both accidents had the same cause: wrong-way driving.

Wrong-way driving, in which a driver travels against traffic on an expressway, is becoming a bigger problem, police reports indicate.

Your chances of meeting such a driver - or inadvertently becoming one yourself - are also increasing as more and more miles of expressways are added and the Interstate system nears completion.

Driving in the wrong direction, which frequently results in head-on collisions, can be a fatal mistake. Wrong-way accidents, according to J. C. Womack, California highway engineer, are fatal six times more often than other driving accidents.

What are the causes of wrong-way driving? Traffic experts have discovered several.

Driving while intoxicated is perhaps the leading reason. Of 500 wrong-way drivers interviewed by the California Highway Patrol one-third had been drinking. An equal number were honestly confused. One-sixth had strayed over the median strip to the wrong side of the highway by carelessness. A small number were illiterate and could not read traffic signs.

What is being done to stop wrong-way driving?

Many traffic experts believe that reflective "Wrong Way" signs used with "Do Not Enter" signs are the best solution to prevent drivers from entering expressways on exit ramps or leaving expressways by entrance ramps.

In Chicago, for example, large reflective signs, highly visible in headlights at night, are being erected on both sides of many exit ramps on the Kennedy expressway. Installation of such signs is planned for other expressways in the area.

According to the Michigan department of state highways, "Do Not Enter - Wrong Way" warning signs posted at exit ramps have substantially reduced wrong-way movements and head-on collisions.

If you encounter a wrong-way driver, don't try to warn him, one safety expert said. Signal a right turn, pull off on the shoulder and get out of the way, he advised.

THE VURST DAY OF SUMMER

This is a summer of anniversaries. New York City will celebrate the 50th year of Guggenheim Memorial Concerts in Central Park on Wednesday, June 21, the first day of summer. Appropriately, nickel beer, nickel ice cream, and nickel hot dogs will be served.

Just a few days later, the Coney Island Chamber of Commerce will celebrate what it claims as the 100th anniversary of the birth of the hot dog. The Chamber asserts that in the summer of 1867 a Coney Island pie hawker named Charlie Feltman put a hot sausage in a toasted wiener roll and sold it for a dime as a frankfurter - after his native Frankfurt, Germany. The Coney Island celebration will be centered on Nathan's Famous, the boardwalk stand which has sold more than 200 million franks.

Stories of the origin of the hot dog story. But the naming of the savory is generally attributed to Tad Dorgan, a New York newspaper cartoonist who saw franks being served for the first time in the early 1900's at the Polo Grounds. Dorgan also is responsible for "dumb Dora," "the cat's pajamas," and other nifties.

As for summer, weathermen are not prepared to say that the spring-that-never-was portends a cold summer. Since 1960 there have been indications that the North American climate is cooling slightly. It might be well to keep earmuffs handy. In 1816, snow fell in New England and parts of New York in June, July, and August.

By tradition, the typical New Yorker is a sophisticated fellow who hobnobs with celebrities, dwells in a penthouse, reads all the latest best sellers, eats only at the fanciest restaurants, spends his evenings at night clubs, gets daily inside tips on what to buy in Wall Street, and knows whom to call at City Hall if he wants to get a traffic ticket fixed.

He's a "guy in the know," and compared to him anybody who dwells west of the Hudson River is a hinterland hayseed.

Ah, me, if life were only like that!

After 30 years of dwelling in O. Henry's fabled Baghdad on the Subway, I've decided that when it comes to "the typical New Yorker" of romantic legend, there probably ain't no such animal.

The "typical New Yorker," if you do happen to meet one, usually turns out to be an out-of-towner here for a lark on a Texas-sized expense account.

"I don't see how you stand the pace here," he says, leaving for home after a week or two spent trying to paint the big city a vivid crimson. "It would get me down."

Such remarks make a real New Yorker want to slit the out-of-towner's throat quietly. For the real New Yorker, like most of his brethren across the country, has to make do on a pretty tight budget. He doesn't see as much of the high-living side of the city in a year as a fast-buck visitor sees in a few nights.

There has been a steady exodus of middle-class white people from the city for several decades. Now the middle-class Negroes and Puerto Ricans are doing the same thing. As soon as they can afford to, they also are moving out to the suburbs in Westchester County and Long Island.

It isn't the mass of natives who keep the $20-a-meal glitter spots and the big expensive Broadway musicals running. New York is a work city, rather than "Fun City," to them.

Your real New Yorker is a guy who labors at an anonymous skyscraper desk and selects his lunch from a drug counter menu.

Your real New Yorker is a Wall Street stenographer who pays more than she can afford for a tiny dark walkup apartment in a Greenwich Village building that would probably be condemned in Vermont as an eyesore.

But they all share that same big dream: to earn enough so they can move away to somewhere cleaner and less noisy and less expensive.

Then they can come back occasionally as tourists and enjoy the big city in the way that only the out-of-towner can, pockets loaded with butter-and-egg money burning to be spent.

VIETNAM: CHINA'S WAR OF ATTRITION

A general has sobering words for Americans.

The general is not William C. Westmoreland, who, in an action unprecedented for a field commander in a time of war, came home from Vietnam to address a joint session of Congress. He is Brig. Gen. Samuel B. Griffith (USMC, Ret.)

Like Westmoreland, however, Griffith foresees no early end to the righting in Vietnam. Holder of a Ph. D. from Oxford in Chinese history as well as the Distinguished Service Cross, Griffith, now a research associate at the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace, believes the war will go on as long as Communist China wants it to go on.

In a recently published book, "The Chinese People's Liberation Army," he writes that Peking "will exert every pressure and take every measure short of direct intervention on the ground to prolong the figthing in South Vietnam and to prevent negotiation of a settlement."

China's regional foreign policy goals have not changed since the Korean War, says Griffith. They are the elimination of American influence and presence from the Asia rimlands and the eventual breaking out of what she sees as an encirclement of her by hostile and menacing American power.

For some time to come, however, she will not be able to muster the economic, political, means to enable her to accomplish these objectives.

Thus an indefinite protration of hostilities in Vietnam is altogether favorable to China's interests - "for a long war will sap American energies, focus American attention on this area to the exclusion of others, drain American strength, impair American morale, damage American prestige, undermine American alliances and so concretely alter 'the balance of forces' to China's benefit."

It has often been said that we must learn to live with an aggressive, militant China.

This is true, agrees Griffith. "But it is equally true that China must learn to live with us and with the world community. At the present time she shows slight indication of wishing to do either."

IMPORTANCE OF RELIGION DECLINES IN AMERICA

When we say "one nation under God" we take it for granted that Americans are a religious people. But are they? Just how important is religion in the U. S., and to how many Americans? A Catholic Digest survey was designed to find out. George Gallup's public - opinion interviewers asked American adults, "How important would you say religion is in your own life -- very important, fairly important, or not very important?" This same question was asked in 1952; the current poll seeks to compare the change in attitudes over this 14-year period.

The Congregationalists are the only ones stating that religion is more important is also up 2% - from 5% to 7%.

The Congregationalists are the only ones stating that religion is more important in 1966 than in 1952 -- from 57% to 62%. In 1952, 47% of the Jews thought religion very important; in1966, only 30% do. Religion is very important; in 1966, only 30% do. Religion is very important to 76% of Roman Catholics; it was 83% 14 years ago. All Protestant denominations are down but 2% - from 76% to 74%.

Among the Protestants, religion is very important to 82% of the Baptists; it was 84% in 1952. The greatest decline is the Methodists, 65% of whom say religion is very important compared to 74% 14 years ago. Sixty-two percent of Episcopalians think religion is very important today; 67% thought so in 1952. Lutherans are down 4% (from 70% to 66%) Presbyterians down 1% (from 72% to 71%).

Students of history, railroad buffs, teachers, writers and others will find the eleventh edition of the "Railroad Film Directory", released recently by the Association of American Railroads to be of extraordinary interest. The Director is a guide to more than 345 films and slide-films owned by or relating to the American railroads.

There are films for child and adult entertainment, films on safety, films on freight handling -- one is even based on the ever-popular children's classic about "The Little Engine That Could."

These films are far more than a dry documentary of an industry. One is entitled "The Great Train Robbery", the famous pioneer film production by Edison in 1903. Others have to do with the Civil War period, the opening of the West, Indian ceremonials, inventions in America's growth, the loggin railroads of the West, iron ore from Labrador, tomorrow' railroading, etc., through an almost endless list.

The "Railroad Film Directory" is in effect a directory of American folklore. This is logical, since the rails have been and are the backbone of the American transportation system, and during most of the life of the nation have been closely associated with the important events that have shaped American history. The story of the railroads is the story of the United States.

Adoption of a constitutional amendment to reform the Electoral College by establishing the Congressional District Plan of choosing presidential electors would have the important effect of doing away with the "straw man" status that such electors now occupy. They would be men and women of prestige in their districts, known to the voters and influential with them.

Their high caliber would make them useful in many capacities during the presidential campaign. But their value to the nation would not end when they cast their votes, each as the representative of the people of his district, for President and Vice President. The formation of 538 electors and 538 runners-up, probably of equal stature with the winners, into a Former Nominees of Presidential Elector Committee would establish an honor guard for liberty.

Their study of urgent government problems and recommendations for their solution could be a vital force for preservation of the Republic. They would form a body of proven competence upon which the President could call for counsel. There is no question that the Former Nominees of Presidential Elector Committee would have vastly more influence than committees so frequently organized to pursue one side of a given subject of national concern.

The contemplation of this potentially great committee is fairly dependent upon an amendment to the U. S. Constitution under which each congressional district would choose one presidential elector and each state in an election at large would choose two electors. Resolutions proposing such an amendment are now before Congress. Congressional approval would be in the public interest. HLH

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- George Brown, former teamster, now foreign secretary for her majesty the queen of England, was entertained by President Johnson at luncheon last week, and complained audibly that he was the only dignitary present who wore brown shoes.

Sitting beside Vice President Humphrey, once elected as a Democratic farmer labor representative from Minnesota, he engaged in some quick repartee with HHH about the danger of upstaging their respective bosses, the prime minister and the President.

"When I returned from the continent with my prime minister," said Brown, "there was a big crowd waiting for us at the airport. I looked out at the crowd, saw my wife and my little granddaughter. The photographers, of course, were there to greet them. But when my granddaughter came running across the airport and threw her arms around my neck the cameramen all deserted the PM and ran over to take me.

"This is no way for a foreign minister to act," Brown told Humphrey. "You don't get anywhere upstaging the prime minister."

Brown proceeded to tell how when vice president Humphrey was in London he visited No. 10 Downing Street, Chequers and Windsor Palace.

"Then I gave a little luncheon for him and told him I wanted him to meet my granddaughter. We went to my home but my granddaughter wasn't there. However, we did find my little dog. When the photographers came up I admonished Hubert, 'don't grab him by the ears.'"

Next day, Vice President Humphrey recalls, the British newspapers came out with a photograph of the vice president petting his dog, captioned, "Foreign Secretary advises Humphrey not to pull British Dog's ears."

WHIPPED IN ABSENTIA

Brown remarked that the British cabinet was "giving me the devil" since his speech at the United Nations admonishing Israel.

"Now that I'm away from my colleagues in the cabinet they're already giving me a whipping."

The foreign secretary sat beside congressman William Bates of Massachusetts who, when the conversation turned to No. 10 Downing Street, asked Brown, "do you know who Downing was?"

"Yes," said Brown. "An American. When you see my brother," he added, referring to the younger Brown who is a distinguished professor of history, "please tell him that this old Teamster knows some history too."

Vice President Humphrey told Brown that he had noted a portrait of William Pitt hanging in No. 10 Downing and was rather concerned to see it had been painted by an artist named Romney.

"I take exception to that kind of partisanship," said the vice president. "However, I was glad to see that the portrait of James Fox, the parliamentarian who took up for the American colonies, was hung in a place of honor."

BUILT TO LAST

Speaking of Americans, Brown mentioned the fact that he had been born in a London flat built by an American named Samuel Peabody, who at that time was considered a great benefactor because he had tried to remedy the housing shortage.

"That house is now 100 years old and it still stands. I was 16 before I ever saw a water tap," said Brown. "What toilet facilities we had were communal. If you see my mother, don't tell her I complained about my birthplace, but it was a very dull, dingy abode, not given to much inspiration.

"I told the prime minister," continued Brown, "that if I'm ever knighted I'll probably be given the title 'Lord Peabody of the building.'"

Brown told how his brother, seven years younger, had run for parliament and has proposed a new tax just three days before election.

"'I need to have words with you,' I told my brother. 'You might be a fine professor but you're not a sound politician. You're going to get whipped. You don't propose a tax increase just before election.' And I described this in Teamster Irish terms. My brother was not pleased.

"Whereupon he won a smashing victory. The next day he phoned me and said, 'perhaps if you can spare the time you'd like to see me again on the subject of politics.'"

A BOMBS AND DICE

The gambling fraternity and citizens of Las Vegas, Nevada, will be glad to know that the atomic energy commission is not planning to disrupt the sporting atmosphere of their city with close - up nuclear blasts.

AEC chairman Glenn Seaborg told the House Appropriations Committee the other day that "higher yield" nuclear devices would not be tested at the present site in Nevada, because Las Vegas "is just too close."

"It would shake up the dice?" suggested Rep. Thomas G. Morris, D-N.M.

"Seismic effects, of course," said Seaborg, adding with a grin: "As congressman Morris says, it will shake up the dice on the table and destroy the odds. More serious than that, it shakes the buildings and so forth and could lead to unsafe conditions. We are looking at test sites in alternative places."

INSIDE REUTHER'S STRATEGY

DETROIT - There are men here - and they do not count themselves greybeards - who recall when union brother fought union brother with metal chains and iron bars and in last resort hammered away with their fists. They moved on each other in long auto caravans and disciplined platoon-sized gangs.

They fought for jurisdiction over skilled jobs in the big factories here and up the line in city after city. It may come to this soon enough.

This is the story to watch as Walter Reuther and the automobile company executives on or about July 10, begin their trienniel ritual when they run the gamut and the gauntlet before the TV cameras and begin formal renogotiations of contracts which expire Sept. 6.

There will be a long siege and splashing headlines and much shuttling between this car city and the national capital. Elo-quently Reuther will denounce the corporate leaders in the class struggle vituperation that everyone expects. That's tradition. He will demand much. That's tradition.

But the key phrase in the key issue in all the jousting with the corporate men who have developed a new eloquence of their own will be something new to the public. Mark it well. It's "contracting out."

Before the final struggle is over late this year, Reuther and his colleagues will make that phrase as famous a household word as their "guaranteed annual wage."

"Contracting out" merely is the corporate practice of calling in outside contractors to supply skilled labor for some task such as carpentering, electrical work, honing up some machines or building some new structures. The outsiders are union men. But they don't belong to Reuther's United Auto Workers. They are members of the AFL-CIO building and construction trades unions whose leaders Reuther has been berating for years.

Now, says Reuther, who is co-chairman of the UAW's Skilled Trades Dept. (some 200,000 strong), this must stop if there are auto union men available and willing to do the work inside the plant. This involves tens of thousands of jobs and hundreds of millions of dollars.

The companies have said, in effect, that contracting out really is no business of the auto union. It's a management right, the executives argue.

But the federal courts have ruled that the companies must bargain with the auto union over such practices - call it contracting out or sub-contracting. This decision came down last February in a case involving General Motors' effort to change operations at its South Gate, Calif., plant. A shift in operations affected six jobs. The men were given other work. But the union sued, saying that the company had to negotiate with it anyway merely on principle - even if no one was laid off at the moment. And the union won.

So Reuther and his colleagues will go into negotiations soon and demand that before there is contracting out, the work must be offered to UAW men who are on layoff, on shorter hours or have not been offered the work.

There are other demands involving sub-contracting. But essentially the union wants control of the work and the jobs. The new technology and "computerology," says the auto union, is wiping out jobs and what is left should go to the auto union members.

And the UAW wants a joint labor-management committee to decide such issues. Furthermore, the union demands that future contracts shall give the UAW skilled tradesmen the "right to strike" when necessary to enforce their position on contracting out.

Management is not about to dash out to buy pens for the signing of such a pact. The companies know they will have to give skilled workers a bigger raise than the other hourly rated employes. This will make it more costly to repair and extend or maintain plants. And it will be more and more desirable to put in new automation and computer operations - as well as to contract out.

Eventually there will be a showdown. The companies will insist on their rights to bring in contractors. The auto union skilled workers are of such a mood they will picket.

The outside construction trades mionists, who have the Teamsters with them, aren't often deterred by "enemy" picket lines. It will be a noisy show.

But it is coming. Just look behind the rhetoric.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

Improved standards in road edge striping and lane markings may one day save your life - even when you're driving in that huge "traffic snarl" known as New York City.

To give motorists an extra edge of safety, America's first city is decorating 180 miles of limited access highways in the five boroughs. Edge lining and lane marking is expected to improve driving safety during the day and at night.

Using special trucks and reflectorized paint, traffic department crews are spraying a solid white line four inches wide along malls and curbs that divide paved roadways and shoulders of the city's expressways.

A double benefit is gained from the white lines, Henry A. Barnes, traffic commissioner, explained.

Striping the malls and curbing, he said, establishes guide lines to help motorists determine the width of the roadway. Secondly, the striping provides a sharp distinction between the ordinary road surface and the "treated" curbs or shoulders which, at night, glow in a car's headlights. Such edging and striping proves especially valuable as a safety feature at night or during inclement weather.

The painting program, Barnes stated, may well be a perpetual procedure in Manhattan's effort to reduce accidents. When the present program is done, in about one year, another will be started, he said.

Techniques of painting on canvas and on pavement can require a far different brush stroke, as Barnes observed.

Pavement painting, for example, is done in several ways.

Where there is a slanted curb, the curb itself is painted. But a straight curb requires a different technique, in which paint is laid six inches away from the curb. This is designed to prevent drivers from running into or jumping the curb.

When there is no curb, painting is also done six inches in from the edge line to discourage drivers from wandering off the road.

Will New York retain a number one rating in such safety applications? Barnes believes it will, although edge striping and lane marking are becoming common safety features in many cities today.

THE LONG AND SHORT OF IT

The appearance of Missouri's junior United States Senator, Edward V. Long, at last weekend's annual meeting of the Missouri Cotton Producers Assn. would prompt the conclusion that Bowling Green's most famous citizen does not intend to withdraw from political life at the end of his term in 1968. At least, it can be observed that he does not intend to withdraw voluntarily.

Senator Long's political and legal tribulations are, by now, well known to readers of this newspaper, which has commented on them extensively. The comments are also well known to Senator Long, who observed to a staff member of The Daily Democrat at the MCPA meeting that some of this publication's recent editorials had been less than kind toward him. This is an understatement, but we plead guilty.

We are not, however, guilty of condoning such practices as Senator Long has been following during his Senate career. Nor are we guilty of thinking that Senator Long, despite his close organized labor connections, will be any asset to the Democratic party in 1968.

Next year's election may well prove to be, in Missouri as well as elsewhere, a Republican election year. Whether it is depends in large measure upon the Democrats and upon those party members who are selected in the primaries.

If Missouri Democrats care to renominate Senator Long to head their state ticket in 1968, then we predict that the political careers of a good many Democrats in Jefferson City will be terminated as of January 1, 1969.

We believe it is that serious, and before the Senate Ethics Committee gets through, we believe it will be even worse.

Indeed, if Senator Long is on the ticket, we predict the Democrats of Missouri will be on the short end of the 1968 election totals.

It's as simple as that.

Two major crashes in the same state and a few days apart claimed the lives of eight people and injured two others.

Both accidents had the same cause: wrong-way driving.

Wrong-way driving, in which a driver travels against traffic on an expressway, is becoming a bigger problem, police reports indicate.

Your chances of meeting such a driver - or inadvertently becoming one yourself - are also increasing as more and more miles of expressways are added and the Interstate system nears completion.

Driving in the wrong direction, which frequently results in head-on collisions, can be a fatal mistake. Wrong-way accidents, according to J. C. Womack, California highway engineer, are fatal six times more often than other driving accidents.

What are the causes of wrong-way driving? Traffic experts have discovered several.

Driving while intoxicated is perhaps the leading reason. Of 500 wrong-way drivers interviewed by the California Highway Patrol one-third had been drinking. An equal number were honestly confused. One-sixth had strayed over the median strip to the wrong side of the highway by carelessness. A small number were illiterate and could not read traffic signs.

What is being done to stop wrong-way driving?

Many traffic experts believe that reflective "Wrong Way" signs used with "Do Not Enter" signs are the best solution to prevent drivers from entering expressways on exit ramps or leaving expressways by entrance ramps.

In Chicago, for example, large reflective signs, highly visible in headlights at night, are being erected on both sides of many exit ramps on the Kennedy expressway. Installation of such signs is planned for other expressways in the area.

According to the Michigan department of state highways, "Do Not Enter - Wrong Way" warning signs posted at exit ramps have substantially reduced wrong-way movements and head-on collisions.

If you encounter a wrong-way driver, don't try to warn him, one safety expert said. Signal a right turn, pull off on the shoulder and get out of the way, he advised.

THE VURST DAY OF SUMMER

This is a summer of anniversaries. New York City will celebrate the 50th year of Guggenheim Memorial Concerts in Central Park on Wednesday, June 21, the first day of summer. Appropriately, nickel beer, nickel ice cream, and nickel hot dogs will be served.

Just a few days later, the Coney Island Chamber of Commerce will celebrate what it claims as the 100th anniversary of the birth of the hot dog. The Chamber asserts that in the summer of 1867 a Coney Island pie hawker named Charlie Feltman put a hot sausage in a toasted wiener roll and sold it for a dime as a frankfurter - after his native Frankfurt, Germany. The Coney Island celebration will be centered on Nathan's Famous, the boardwalk stand which has sold more than 200 million franks.

Stories of the origin of the hot dog story. But the naming of the savory is generally attributed to Tad Dorgan, a New York newspaper cartoonist who saw franks being served for the first time in the early 1900's at the Polo Grounds. Dorgan also is responsible for "dumb Dora," "the cat's pajamas," and other nifties.

As for summer, weathermen are not prepared to say that the spring-that-never-was portends a cold summer. Since 1960 there have been indications that the North American climate is cooling slightly. It might be well to keep earmuffs handy. In 1816, snow fell in New England and parts of New York in June, July, and August.

By tradition, the typical New Yorker is a sophisticated fellow who hobnobs with celebrities, dwells in a penthouse, reads all the latest best sellers, eats only at the fanciest restaurants, spends his evenings at night clubs, gets daily inside tips on what to buy in Wall Street, and knows whom to call at City Hall if he wants to get a traffic ticket fixed.

He's a "guy in the know," and compared to him anybody who dwells west of the Hudson River is a hinterland hayseed.

Ah, me, if life were only like that!

After 30 years of dwelling in O. Henry's fabled Baghdad on the Subway, I've decided that when it comes to "the typical New Yorker" of romantic legend, there probably ain't no such animal.

The "typical New Yorker," if you do happen to meet one, usually turns out to be an out-of-towner here for a lark on a Texas-sized expense account.

"I don't see how you stand the pace here," he says, leaving for home after a week or two spent trying to paint the big city a vivid crimson. "It would get me down."

Such remarks make a real New Yorker want to slit the out-of-towner's throat quietly. For the real New Yorker, like most of his brethren across the country, has to make do on a pretty tight budget. He doesn't see as much of the high-living side of the city in a year as a fast-buck visitor sees in a few nights.

There has been a steady exodus of middle-class white people from the city for several decades. Now the middle-class Negroes and Puerto Ricans are doing the same thing. As soon as they can afford to, they also are moving out to the suburbs in Westchester County and Long Island.

It isn't the mass of natives who keep the $20-a-meal glitter spots and the big expensive Broadway musicals running. New York is a work city, rather than "Fun City," to them.

Your real New Yorker is a guy who labors at an anonymous skyscraper desk and selects his lunch from a drug counter menu.

Your real New Yorker is a Wall Street stenographer who pays more than she can afford for a tiny dark walkup apartment in a Greenwich Village building that would probably be condemned in Vermont as an eyesore.

But they all share that same big dream: to earn enough so they can move away to somewhere cleaner and less noisy and less expensive.

Then they can come back occasionally as tourists and enjoy the big city in the way that only the out-of-towner can, pockets loaded with butter-and-egg money burning to be spent.

VIETNAM: CHINA'S WAR OF ATTRITION

A general has sobering words for Americans.

The general is not William C. Westmoreland, who, in an action unprecedented for a field commander in a time of war, came home from Vietnam to address a joint session of Congress. He is Brig. Gen. Samuel B. Griffith (USMC, Ret.)

Like Westmoreland, however, Griffith foresees no early end to the righting in Vietnam. Holder of a Ph. D. from Oxford in Chinese history as well as the Distinguished Service Cross, Griffith, now a research associate at the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace, believes the war will go on as long as Communist China wants it to go on.

In a recently published book, "The Chinese People's Liberation Army," he writes that Peking "will exert every pressure and take every measure short of direct intervention on the ground to prolong the figthing in South Vietnam and to prevent negotiation of a settlement."

China's regional foreign policy goals have not changed since the Korean War, says Griffith. They are the elimination of American influence and presence from the Asia rimlands and the eventual breaking out of what she sees as an encirclement of her by hostile and menacing American power.

For some time to come, however, she will not be able to muster the economic, political, means to enable her to accomplish these objectives.

Thus an indefinite protration of hostilities in Vietnam is altogether favorable to China's interests - "for a long war will sap American energies, focus American attention on this area to the exclusion of others, drain American strength, impair American morale, damage American prestige, undermine American alliances and so concretely alter 'the balance of forces' to China's benefit."

It has often been said that we must learn to live with an aggressive, militant China.

This is true, agrees Griffith. "But it is equally true that China must learn to live with us and with the world community. At the present time she shows slight indication of wishing to do either."

Their high caliber would make them useful in many capacities during the presidential campaign. But their value to the nation would not end when they cast their votes, each as the representative of the people of his district, for President and Vice President. The formation of 538 electors and 538 runners-up, probably of equal stature with the winners, into a Former Nominees of Presidential Elector Committee would establish an honor guard for liberty.

Their study of urgent government problems and recommendations for their solution could be a vital force for preservation of the Republic. They would form a body of proven competence upon which the President could call for counsel. There is no question that the Former Nominees of Presidential Elector Committee would have vastly more influence than committees so frequently organized to pursue one side of a given subject of national concern.

The contemplation of this potentially great committee is fairly dependent upon an amendment to the U. S. Constitution under which each congressional district would choose one presidential elector and each state in an election at large would choose two electors. Resolutions proposing such an amendment are now before Congress. Congressional approval would be in the public interest. HLH

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- George Brown, former teamster, now foreign secretary for her majesty the queen of England, was entertained by President Johnson at luncheon last week, and complained audibly that he was the only dignitary present who wore brown shoes.

Sitting beside Vice President Humphrey, once elected as a Democratic farmer labor representative from Minnesota, he engaged in some quick repartee with HHH about the danger of upstaging their respective bosses, the prime minister and the President.

"When I returned from the continent with my prime minister," said Brown, "there was a big crowd waiting for us at the airport. I looked out at the crowd, saw my wife and my little granddaughter. The photographers, of course, were there to greet them. But when my granddaughter came running across the airport and threw her arms around my neck the cameramen all deserted me PM and ran over to take me.

"This is no way for a foreign minister to act," Brown told Humphrey. "You don't get anywhere upstaging the prime minister."

Brown proceeded to tell how when vice president Humphrey was in London he visited No. 10 Downing Street, Chequers and Windsor Palace.

"Then I gave a little luncheon for him and told him I wanted him to meet my granddaughter. We went to my home but my granddaughter wasn't there. However, we did find my little dog. When the photographers came up I admonished Hubert, 'don't grab him by the ears.'"

Next day, Vice President Humphrey recalls, the British newspapers came out with a photograph of the vice president petting his dog, captioned, "Foreign Secretary advises Humphrey not to pull British Dog's ears."

WHIPPED IN ABSENTIA

Brown remarked that the British cabinet was "giving me the devil" since his speech at the United Nations admonishing Israel.

"Now that I'm away from my colleagues in the cabinet they're already giving me a whipping."

The foreign secretary sat beside congressman William Bates of Massachusetts who, when the conversation turned to No. 10 Downing Street, asked Brown, "do you know who Downing was?"

"Yes," said Brown. "An American. When you see my brother," he added, referring to the younger Brown who is a distinguished professor of history, "please tell him that this old teamster knows some history too."

Vice President Humphrey told Brown that he had noted a portrait of William Pitt hanging in No. 10 Downing and was rather concerned to see it had been painted by an artist named Romney.

"I take exception to that kind of partisanship," said the vice president. "However, I was glad to see that the portrait of James Fox, the parliamentarian who took up for the American colonies, was hung in a place of honor."

BUILT TO LAST

Speaking of Americans, Brown mentioned the fact that he had been born in a London flat built by an American named Samuel Peabody, who at that time was considered a great benefactor because he had tried to remedy the housing shortage.

"That house is now 100 years old and it still stands. I was 16 before I ever saw a water tap," said Brown. "What toilet facilities we had were communal. If you see my mother, don't tell her I complained about my birthplace, but it was a very dull, dingy abode, not given to much inspiration.

"I told the prime minister," continued Brown, "that if I'm ever knighted I'll probably be given the title 'Lord Peabody of the building.'"

Brown told how his brother, seven years younger, had run for parliament and has proposed a new tax just three days before election.

"'I need to have words with you,' I told my brother. 'You might be a fine professor but you're not a sound politician. You're going to get whipped. You don't propose a tax increase just before election.' And I described this in Teamster Irish terms. My brother was not pleased.

"Whereupon he won a smashing victory. The next day he phoned me and said, 'perhaps if you can spare the time you'd like to see me again on the subject of politics.'"

A BOMBS AND DICE

The gambling fraternity and citizens of Las Vegas, Nevada, will be glad to know that the atomic energy commission is not planning to disrupt the sporting atmosphere of their city with close - up nuclear blasts.

AEC chairman Glenn Seaborg told the House Appropriations Committee the other day that "higher yield" nuclear devices would not be tested at the present site in Nevada, because Las Vegas "is just too close."

"It would shake up the dice?" suggested Rep. Thomas G. Morris, D-N.M.

"Seismic effects, of course," said Seaborg, adding with a grin: "As congressman Morris says, it will shake up the dice on the table and destroy the odds. More serious than that, it shakes the buildings and so forth and could lead to unsafe conditions. We are looking at test sites in alternative places."

Inside Labor

INSIDE REUTHER'S STRATEGY

DETROIT - There are men here - and they do not count themselves greybeards - who recall when union brother fought union brother with metal chains and iron bars and in last resort hammered away with their fists. They moved on each other in long auto caravans and disciplined platoon-sized gangs.

They fought for jurisdiction over skilled jobs in the big factories here and up the line in city after city. It may come to this soon enough.

This is the story to watch as Walter Reuther and the automobile company executives on or about July 10, begin their trienniel ritual when they run the gamut and the gauntlet before the TV cameras and begin formal renogotiations of contracts which expire Sept. 6.

There will be a long siege and splashing headlines and much shuttling between this car city and the national capital. Eloquently Reuther will denounce the corporate leaders in the class struggle vituperation that everyone expects. That's tradition. He will demand much. That's tradition.

But the key phrase in the key issue in all the jousting with the corporate men who have developed a new eloquence of their own will be something new to the public. Mark it well. It's "contracting out."

Before the final struggle is over late this year, Reuther and his colleagues will make that phrase as famous a household word as their "guaranteed annual wage."

"Contracting out" merely is the corporate practice of calling in outside contractors to supply skilled labor for some task such as carpentering, electrical work, honing up some machines or building some new structures. The outsiders are union men. But they don't belong to Reuther's United Auto Workers. They are members of the AFL-CIO building and construction trades unions whose leaders Reuther has been berating for years.

Now, says Reuther, who is co-chairman of the UAW's Skilled Trades Dept. (some 200,000 strong), this must stop if there are auto union men available and willing to do the work inside the plant. This involves tens of thousands of jobs and hundreds of millions of dollars.

The companies have said, in effect, that contracting out really is no business of the auto union. It's a management right, the executives argue.

But the federal courts have ruled that the companies must bargain with the auto union over such practices - call it contracting out or sub-contracting. This decision came down last February in a case involving General Motors' effort to change operations at its South Gate, Calif., plant. A shift in operations affected six jobs. The men were given other work. But the union sued, saying that the company had to negotiate with it anyway merely on principle - even if no one was laid off at the moment. And the union won.

So Reuther and his colleagues will go into negotiations soon and demand that before there is contracting out, the work must be offered to UAW men who are on layoff, on shorter hours or have not been offered the work.

There are other demands involving sub-contracting. But essentially the union wants control of the work and the jobs. The new technology and "computerology," says the auto union, is wiping out jobs and what is left should go to the auto union members.

And the UAW wants a joint labor-management committee to decide such issues. Furthermore, the union demands that future contracts shall give the UAW skilled tradesmen the "right to strike" when necessary to enforce their position on contracting out.

Management is not about to dash out to buy pens for the signing of such a pact. The companies know they will have to give skilled workers a bigger raise than the other hourly rate employes. This will make it more costly to repair and extend or maintain plants. And it will be more and more desirable to put in new automation and computer operations - as well as to contract out.

Eventually there will be a showdown. The companies will insist on their rights to bring in contractors. The auto union skilled workers are of such a mood they will picket.

The outside construction tradesmen, who have the Teamsters with them, aren't often deterred by "enemy" picket lines. It will be a noisy show.

But it is coming. Just look behind the rhetoric.

The reception was held in the educational building of the church. The bride's table was covered with a white cloth overskirted with net with white satin runners trimmed with daisies. A square, three-tiered wedding cake topped with fresh daisies and a tiny bluebird, with swans holding the columns, centered the table flanked by crystal candelabra and white tapers. Bouquets of pink carnations graced the reception room. Mrs. C. R. Davis Jr., and Mrs. Otto Green were in charge of the arrangements. Miss Sandra Hinson, cousin of the bride, presided at the punch bowl and Miss Rita Cude of Blackwood, Ark., and Miss Martha Lamar of Gideon served the cake. Miss Judy Hinson, cousin of the bride, was in charge of the guest book. The registry table held a white bird cage, trimmed with pink and white flowers, with a white dove.

Giants Blank Cards, Reds Lose

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

St. Louis, was blanked 6-0 by San Francisco's Mike McCormick, but stayed on top by 3½ games in the National League pennant chase as runner-up Cincinnati also lost.

The Cards had McCormick in trouble only in the fourth. He scattered seven hits and didn't walk a man. Hal Lanier greeted Cardinal relief pitcher Ron Willis with a bases-loaded double in the fifth to break it open. Lou Brock and Orlando Cepeda had two hits each for St. Louis.

The first act proved more profitable. At least several of the Pirates earned $100 each for it. They didn't get anything for the second act except a lot of confusion and a 5-2 loss to the New York Mets.

In the pre-game festivities, the Pirates and Mets acted out a triple play for a scene in the move, "The Odd Couple," which stars Matthau as a sloppy sports writer and Lemmon as his roommate who is obsessed with cleanliness.

In the scene, Bill Mazeroski—subbing for Roberto Clemente who rejected the $100 role—hits into the triple play.

In the game, the bizarre festivities centered around the part of the Pirate line-up that followed Mazeroski, the No. 5 hitter in the batting order.

In less zany National League games Atlanta clobbered Houston 13-5, Los Angeles whipped Cincinnati 9-0 and Philadelphia stopped Chicago 4-2.

The odd incident in the Pirate-Met game came in the third inning after Jose Pagan cut the New York lead to 5-2 with a two-run double. As Jim Pagliarone stepped into the batter's box, Mets Manager Wes Westrum emerged from the dugout.

"That man batted out of turn," Westrum told plate umpire Al Barlick.

"He did?" Barlick asked, somewhat surprised.

"Yes," Westrum coolly replied.

Indeed Pagan had batted out of turn. So had Gene Alley, who preceded Pagan with the second out in the inning.

As the puzzle became unraveled, the participants learned that in the official line-up handed Barlick and Westrum before the game, Pagan was listed as the sixth batter and Alley the seventh. But in the line-up listed on the scoreboard, Alley was No. 6 and Pagan No. 7.

And, unfortunately for the Pirates, they were following the scoreboard even though the correct, official line-up was posted in their dugout.

How did the scoreboard happen to be wrong? It seems a Pirate broadcaster asked Walker before the game for his line-up, and Walker reeled off—as it turned out, incorrectly—a batting order with Pagan following Alley.

"There were six million people asking me for my line-up," Walker said afterward. "I'll never give it out that way again."

The broadcaster, in the course of conversation, relayed the line-up to the man responsible for putting it on the scoreboard. So there it was.

Met coach Sheriff Robinson caught the discrepancy, but Westrum let it go through the first two innings when the reversal of Alley and Pagan did the Mets no harm.

The turn of events enabled the Mets to hold onto the victory behind a four-run first-inning outburst, capped by Ron Swoboda's three-run homer.

Hank Aaron smashed his 19th and 20th homers, a grand slam and a two-run blast, for Atlanta. Houston starter Wade Blasingame, a Brave until recently, walked three men before Aaron connected in the third.

Don Sutton set down Cincinnati on two hits and received solid support from batterymate John Roseboro, who drove in four runs with a pair of doubles.

The Phillies snapped Chicago's winning streak at seven games. Don Lock's three-run homer in the third did the heavy damage to the Cubs, and Rick Wise stymied them on three hits before needing relief help from Dick Hall in the seventh.

Yastrezemski had the sniffles today after returning to the Boston Red Sox' lineup in Tuesday night's 3-2 victory over Minnesota. But Al Kaline and Frank Robinson, the other two-thirds of the AL All-Star outfield, were far less fortunate.

Kaline, Detroit's injury-prone superstar, all but knocked himself out of the July 11 classic when he broke his right hand in a rare fit of temper during the slumping Tigers' 0-1 loss to Cleveland.

And Robinson, Baltimore's non-pareil slugger, was nursing a giant-size headache after suffering a slight concussion in a baseline collision with Chicago second baseman Al Weis as the first-place White Sox trimmed the Orioles 5-0.

In Tuesday night's other AL games the Washington Senators drubbed California 9-4 and the New York Yankees edged Kansas City 2-1 after losing their doubleheader opener 10-2.

Kaline, struck out by Cleveland's Sam McDowell in the sixth inning, returned to the dugout and slammed his bat into the bat rack, fracturing a metacarpal bone in his hand. He'll be out two or three weeks, according to Dr. Russell Wright, the Tigers' physician. Detroit's month-long slump, dampens Tiger hopes for their first pennant since 1945.

And Robinson, Baltimore's non-pareil slugger, was nursing a giant-size headache after suffering a slight concussion in a baseline collision with Chicago second baseman Al Weis as the first-place White Sox trimmed the Orioles 5-0.

In Tuesday night's other AL games the Washington Senators drubbed California 9-4 and the New York Yankees edged Kansas City 2-1 after losing their doubleheader opener 10-2.

Kaline, struck out by Cleveland's Sam McDowell in the sixth inning, returned to the dugout and slammed his bat into the bat rack, fracturing a metacarpal bone in his hand. He'll be out two or three weeks, according to Dr. Russell Wright, the Tigers' physician. Detroit's month-long slump, dampens Tiger hopes for their first pennant since 1945.

A gal can make a better pitch at matrimony if she has an assortment of good curves.

People who quit smoking show a lot of will power, but not enough to quit talking about it.

Then there were the teenagers who got potted on pop and started harmonizing "Sweet Adolescence."

If you want your youngsters to behave, tell them good conduct will please Batman.

Keep old friends and make new ones if you want to qualify for sociable security.

Women can drive as well as men can, which, when you come to think of it, isn't such a great achievement.

The President's war on crime seeks to close the criminality gap.

Never let visiting a friend in the hospital make you

smug about your own good health.

One thing missing in our crowded, hectic city life is simple solitude for silent meditation.

If you have plenty of time to waste, you can do it by being punctual.

* * *

Past fashions were often ridiculous, but today the discouraging fact is that they are ridiculous on purpose.

Paradoxically, most New Year resolutions die because folks are too lazy to execute them.

The first thing a new dieter learns is that what's good to eat is bad.

Folks no longer put raw beefsteak on black eyes. It's cheaper to see a doctor.

Being deep down in debt often comes from flying too high.

A tourist is a guy who travels a thousand miles to buy a picture post card.

The cost of living is up and so is the cost of living it up.

Many a smart gal works hard to play dumb.

Looks like it will be a long time before boys will be boys

Why is it so hard to get money and so easy to spend it?

Surely the gods must be chuckling at the prospect of soldiers taking a time out from killing each other in order to celebrate the birthday of the Prince of Peace.

Bi-State Turnpike Discussion Slated

TOPEKA (AP) — Interstate cooperation in constructing a Missouri River crossing to connect a proposed Kansas Mid-Continent International toll road with a Missouri route to the Kansas City, Mo., airport will be discussed Thursday.

John D. Montgomery, Kansas highway director, said Tuesday he will meet with the chairman of the Missouri Highway Commission, Jack Stapleton, in Kansas City.

Foreign visitors from less highly industrialized countries are often bemused by the mechanization found in everyday American life. In New York, for example, an Indian exchange student was fascinated by doors that open and close automatically when a beam of light is obstructed.

But, after watching for a while, she was less impressed. "At home in Madras," she said, "we are getting exactly the same effect with a small boy working the door." Robert Trumbull

A gal can make a better pitch at matrimony if she has an assortment of good curves.

People who quit smoking show a lot of will power, but not enough to quit talking about it.

Then there were the teenagers who got potted on pop and started harmonizing "Sweet Adolescence."

If you want your youngsters to behave, tell them good conduct will please Batman.

Keep old friends and make new ones if you want to qualify for sociable security.

Women can drive as well as men can, which, when you come to think of it, isn't such a great achievement.

The President's war on crime seeks to close the criminality gap.

Never let visiting a friend in the hospital make you

smug about your own good health.

One thing missing in our crowded, hectic city life is simple solitude for silent meditation.

If you have plenty of time to waste, you can do it by being punctual.

* * *

Past fashions were often ridiculous, but today the discouraging fact is that they are ridiculous on purpose.

Paradoxically, most New Year resolutions die because folks are too lazy to execute them.

The first thing a new dieter learns is that what's good to eat is bad.

Folks no longer put raw beefsteak on black eyes. It's cheaper to see a doctor.

Being deep down in debt often comes from flying too high.

A tourist is a guy who travels a thousand miles to buy a picture post card.

The cost of living is up and so is the cost of living it up.

Many a smart gal works hard to play dumb.

Looks like it will be a long time before boys will be boys

Why is it so hard to get money and so easy to spend it?

Surely the gods must be chuckling at the prospect of soldiers taking a time out from killing each other in order to celebrate the birthday of the Prince of Peace.

Women in a crowded bus find chivalry is a standing joke.

Training Course Begins July 11

Rainbow Girls Install State Officers

Other officers named were: Janet Robertson of North Kansas City, grand associate adviser; Linda Craig of Salem, charity; Susan Shagets of Joplin, hope; Judy Risner of Osage Beach, faith, and Jeanne Broadbeck of Liberty, treasurer.

Bi-State Turnpike Discussion Slated

TOPEKA (AP) — Interstate cooperation in constructing a Missouri River crossing to connect a proposed Kansas Mid-Continent International toll road with a Missouri route to the Kansas City, Mo., airport will be discussed Thursday.

John D. Montgomery, Kansas highway director, said Tuesday he will meet with the chairman of the Missouri Highway Commission, Jack Stapleton, in Kansas City.

Foreign visitors from less highly industrialized countries are often bemused by the mechanization found in everyday American life. In New York, for example, an Indian exchange student was fascinated by doors that open and close automatically when a beam of light is obstructed.

But, after watching for a while, she was less impressed. "At home in Madras," she said, "we are getting exactly the same effect with a small boy working the door." Robert Trumbull

Dentist Not Responsible For Defective Needle

By Jack Strauss, LL.B.

Barney had a tooth that was deriving him to extraction. But being a coward, by the time he finally got to the dentist it became a major production to pull it out. His whole mouth was tender and sore but it didn't compare to how sore Barney was when the dentist jabbed a needle into his jaw and the needle broke in two. And, if that wasn't enough of a complication, things became even more involved when Barney sued the dentist for the injury to his jaw. It seemed that while the traitorous needle had looked in fine fettle, its medal contained a hidden defect.

"What's he want from me?" queried the tooth driller in court. "I'm only a dentist. It's not my fault I got stuck with a bad needle."

"When a man resorts to a dangerous weapon like a hyporder-mic," retorted Barney, "it's up to him to make sure it's in safe working order. After all, a dentist isn't supposed to just run a filling station. He's supposed to be an expert with his equipment."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make the dentist pay for Barney's agony?

This is how the judge ruled: The dentist did not have to pay. The judge held that when a tool breaks as the result of a hidden defect, and through no fault of the user, the user cannot be held responsible for the consequences. In this case, Barney's injury was due to the hidden fault of the needle and not the dentist.

Wordy Condelences Only Add to Couple's Grief

Dear Ann Landers: I just read the letter from the boy whose father died. He wrote to tell you the stupid things people said to his mother at the funeral. I hope some of those ignorant folks will pay attention to his letter and to mine, as well.

Recently we lost our adorable four - year - old daughter. She was retarded, but it didn't matter to us. We loved her just the same. I can count on one hand the people who said, "I am sorry" - - - and let it go at that. Almost every person said, "She is better off - - -" or "It's really a blessing---" or "Now you won't have to worry anymore." One woman suggested that now I could have more free time and could join the garden club.

Please, Ann, tell your readers if they attend the funeral of a retarded or a handicapped child, it isn't necessary to remind the parents that their child was different from other children. A simple "I'm sorry" is enough. ---TEMPLE TEXAS

Dear Temple: Here is your letter and I can add nothing except my thanks to you for writing it. I do hope you understand that these people meant to say something supportive and comforting, but, unfortunately, their remarks were grossly off target.

Dear Ann Landers: I am sitting home alone watching TV, while my husband is at a party. It is quite an affair I am sure, but he forgot to tell me about it until 5:30 tonight when he telephoned to ask me to make sure his suit was ready and his shoes were shined. Of course it was too late for me to get my hair fixed and find a baby-sitter for the children.

This is not the first time he has pulled this stunt and it probably won't be the last. I am a nice looking girl and can carry on a good conversation. If my husband is ashamed of me I can't figure out the reason. I guess he has a better time at parties when he can behave like a bachelor. Will you please tell me what to do about this humiliating situation? -SUB-BASEMENT RULES

Dear Sub: Party invitations are usually sent to the house, addressed to Mr. and Mrs. or if it's a phone invitation, one wife calls the other. I am mystified as to why you learn of these parties at the least moment. Hunt up some sitters who can be called on short notice and don't be so fussy about your hair. The next time he pulls this cutie, get yourself ready and go with him.

Dear Ann Landers: Please say something to people who talk instead of eat. Six of us go out for dinner together a couple of times a week. One woman in the group starts to talk the minute the food arrives and she doesn't touch her plate until everyone else has finished. Then we all have to wait for her to eat her main course before we can get our dessert. She is, unfortunately, a very slow eater. Sometimes we have to wait as long as 30 minutes.

This habit of hers always makes us late for the theater or the card game or whatever we have planned. If you have a cure, please pass it on. -- X. ASPERATED

Dear X.: If no one has told this woman to stop talking and to start eating, someone should. Since your are the one who wrote, I suggest that you be the one to tell her.

What is French kissing? Is it wrong? Who should set the necking limits -- the boy or the girl? Can a shotgun wedding succeed? Read Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Sex -- Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50¢ in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Cave Search Groups Divide $26,300 Fund

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP)— City officials Monday night divided a $26,300 fund among seven groups that participated in the fruitless search for three lost Hannibal boys.

The money went to groups from Hannibal, Desoto, Columbia, Rolla and St. Louis, Quincy, Ill., and Washington, D.C. it was collected by radio station KHMO and businessmen and channeled through the station.

The groups made intensive searches in caves south of Hannibal for the boys, who were last seen May 10. The boys are 14-year-old Edwin Craig Dowell, 13-year-old Joey W. Hoag and his brother, Billy, 11.

All my training and experience before receiving my commission in the Air Force had been in radio, but I was promptly assigned to a job advising men on their government insurance and retirement benefits. So when a colonel from the training group called one day and said, "Lieutenant, I understand you have some radio experience," I proudly told him all about my radio background. When he asked if I was familiar with different types of microphones, I had visions of an important job, probably with the Armed Forces radio network.

"Wonderful," said the voice from the other end of the line. "You're just the man we're looking for. We need someone to call bingo numbers at the officers' club."

Cave Search Groups Divide $26,300 Fund

HANNIBAL, Mo. (AP)— City officials Monday night divided a $26,300 fund among seven groups that participated in the fruitless search for three lost Hannibal boys.

The money went to groups from Hannibal, Desoto, Columbia, Rolla and St. Louis, Quincy, Ill., and Washington, D.C. it was collected by radio station KHMO and businessmen and channeled through the station.

The groups made intensive searches in caves south of Hannibal for the boys, who were last seen May 10. The boys are 14-year-old Edwin Craig Dowell, 13-year-old Joey W. Heag and his brother, Billy, 11.

All my training and experience before receiving my commission in the Air Force had been in radio, but I was promptly assigned to a job advising men on their government insurance and retirement benefits. So when a colonel from the training group called one day and said, "Lieutenant, I understand you have some radio experience," I proudly told him all about my radio background. When he asked if I was familiar with different types of microphones, I had visions of an important job, probably with the Armed Forces radio network.

"Wonderful," said the voice from the other end of the line. "You're just the man we're looking for. We need someone to call bingo numbers at the officers' club."

In 1778, the Revolutionary War battle of Monmouth, N.J., was fought.

In 1838, Britain's Queen Victoria was coronated.

In 1919, the Versailles Treaty was signed in France.

One year ago— U.S. troops started leaving the Dominican Republic in the first step toward dissolving the inter-American peace force.

In California a polltaker asked a mild-looking woman, "Would you object to seeing a man being executed for murder on television?" "No," she promptly replied. "No, I wouldn't." "What is your reason?" the polltaker asked. "Well," she said, smiling cheerfully, "I just love television!" Clare Boothe Luce

Medicaid Bills Go Through

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Senate passed and sent to Gov. Warren E. Hearnes today the welfare-Medicaid bills he recommended.

The bills were approved earlier by the Senate Economics Committee, which determines whether the state can afford such legislation.

Then the major bill was passed 29-3 with little debate. Most of the argument came Tuesday night when the Senate adopted an expanded House version of the bills.

The governor agreed to the expansion after he felt the state had the money to pay for it. The additional funds had been requested especially to take care of medical needs of the poor in the St. Louis and Kansas City metropolitan areas.

With the major bill disposed of the Senate then passed, 31-1, bills expanding medical services for the blind. Blackwell was the only dissenter.

Another of the governor's bills passed and sent to him today was one to extend state aid to kindergartens at an estimated cost of $5,461,000 the first year.

Under the expanded version adopted by the House to implement Title 19 more fully, in patient and out patient hospital and medical services would be provided welfare recipients along with drugs, X-rays and dental care.

The state cost would be an estimated $11,8 million a year, matched by about $17 million in federal funds.

The package includes two bills extending medical care to the blind and raising their pensions from $80 to $85 a month. Their aid would come from the blind pension fund, not the state's general revenue.

While we were in England for a vacation, my brother-in-law, who is also a minister, took over my husband's pulpit and lived in the parsonage during our absence. Upon our return we found this notation taped to the bathroom scales: "Deuteronomy 25:15." Looking it up in the Bible, we read: "But thou shalt have a perfect and just weight, a perfect and just measure shalt thou have: that thy days may be lengthened in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

I got $2,000 worth of life insurance for only $100. I don't mean $100 a year either!

Dad put my name on a United of Omaha Space Age Security Plan. He bought me $2,000 worth of life insurance for only $100. And, believe it or not, that's all he'll ever have to pay. My insurance is good until I'm 23. Then I take over. I can convert it and get up to $10,000 worth of coverage, without a physical exam.

Sound good? Talk to your Dad. Ask him to call his friendly representative for Mutual of Omaha and Mutual's life insurance affiliate, United of Omaha.

Medicaid Bills Go Through

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Senate passed and sent to Gov. Warren E. Hearnes today the welfare-Medicaid bills he recommended.

The bills were approved earlier by the Senate Economics Committee, which determines whether the state can afford such legislation.

Then the major bill was passed 29-3 with little debate. Most of the argument came Tuesday night when the Senate adopted an expanded House version of the bills.

The governor agreed to the expansion after he felt the state had the money to pay for it. The additional funds had been requested especially to take care of medical needs of the poor in the St. Louis and Kansas City metropolitan areas.

With the major bill disposed of the Senate then passed, 31-1, bills expanding medical services for the blind. Blackwell was the only dissenter.

Another of the governor's bills passed and sent to him today was one to extend state aid to kindergartens at an estimated cost of $5,461,000 the first year.

Under the expanded version adopted by the House to implement Title 19 more fully, in patient and out patient hospital and medical services would be provided welfare recipients along with drugs, X-rays and dental care.

The state cost would be an estimated $11.8 million a year, matched by about $17 million in federal funds.

The package includes two bills extending medical care to the blind and raising their pensions from $80 to $85 a month. Their aid would come from the blind pension fund, not the state's general revenue.

What an unexciting summer! Here I am suppose to be writing an interesting and chatty little column and absolutely nothing interesting and chatty has happened. I think right about now would be a good time to take a vacation. Remember me? This is the summer that I was going to relax in, well it has turned out just like all the others, with one exception. Not only have the kids been sick but this year I've even managed a little of that myself. Then true to form, I ended up on that inevitable committee, and I forget my kids were old enough to learn swimming and that meant more taxi service; also, my calender is swamped with summer birthdays which must be recognized, and I give up. In other words, this summer is half way gone, and I haven't even had time to catch my second breath, much less relax!

I wonder if people with full time help really know how good they've got it? Course, I forgot I have to write this column once a week and the local news (and by the way, why has no one been calling me?) every day and it's no wonder I'm pooped. The next time they ask for volunteers for the space program, I'm going to request the moon mission. It looks so quiet up there. Oh my, another crisis, my youngest is having a tantrum (a loud one in case you're interested), because his brother is riding his bicycle in the street and I won't give the little one permission to join him on his trike. It would be so peaceful if I'd just say yes, but I'd sure hate to have to replace him! Well, I can take strong action, either that or large ear plugs, is definitely being called for, so if you'll pardon me people, I must go and make like that age-old villian, the mother.

DAEOC Plans Its Future

PORTAGEVILLE -- Twenty-three neighborhood service center coordinators of a six-county area met in the Delta Area Economics Opportunity Corporation office Wednesday to discuss projects for the coming year.

The coordinators were asked to submit suggestions to Clyde Jenking, component analyst.

A. W. Wright, elected executive director of DAEOC, spoke.

Also on the program were Cecil Lemonds, DAEOC assistant director; Robert Kearbey, fiscal officer; J. T. Holder, NSC cosupervisor; Chip Schmerbauch, NSC cosupervisor; Alex Cooper, Neighborhood Youth Corps director, and Allene McCaskill, thrift shop supervisor.

Cooper explained that he hoped to be able to place one boy or one girl in each center through efforts of the Neighborhood Youth corporation.

Mrs. McCaskill reported that the thrift shop will be continued through the neighborhood service centers beginning July 1. Four persons over 50 years of age will be hired in each center to help mend and sew clothing for the impoverished.

Legislature Votes Pay Increase

JEFFERSON CITY -- Five months after the "monster" was chopped into pieces by the Missouri House, one of its three parts came alive.

Last week the House, which earlier had broken the Senate's so-called "monster" salary bill into three smaller bills, passed the one designed to raise state officials' salaries.

Original salary proposals were part of a Senate bill introduced in January. But the bill, nicknamed the "monster" because it included provisions for legislative, judicial and state official pay raises within its unwieldy confines, was broken up into legislative, judicial and state official proposals.

Under the plan sent to the Governor on a 98-48 House vote, salaries for six officeholders would be increased. The governor would get $37,500 instead of his present $25,000. Secretary of state, treasurer and auditor would get $5,000 raises, for salaries of $20,000. The attorney general will receive $25,000 and his job will be made full time. The lieutenant governor's pay will jump from $12,000 to $16,000.

The legislative part of the monster, amended by the Senate and near final voting in the House, shows every sign of reviving. It would set pay at $7,200 per year instead of the current $4,800. There is some doubt that judicial raises, which must be passed by the House and sent to the Senate will complete that route before the end of the session.

When asked about the number of salary- raise proposals, Rep. Richard Rabbit, majority floor leader, said it is not unusual. He said such proposals are made every year. But he noted that they have not been granted for seven years and therefore chances for passage were good. "With the inflationary trend, coupled with the raise not going into effedt until 1969, I think the bills are reasonable," he added.

Missouri's proposed pay hikes will put her about midway in salaries paid to state officials. She will be among the leaders in salaries paid to governors. According to 1965 figures, Hearnes' $37,500 would make him sixth highest paid governor. New York's Gov. John Rockefeller is the current leader, at $50,000 per year. California's governor is a not-so-close second with $44,100. Arkansas pays the least, with a $10,000 figure.

When analyzing legislative earnings it is more accurate to figure in per diem and living expenses with salary. According to 1965 figures, for the two-year session, Missouri legislators earned an average of $11,550, placing them tenth among states. If the current legislative bill is passed their standing will, of course, increase.

Last on the legislative list is New Hampshire. There, legislators earn $200 a year. The figure was set in their state constitution and those fellows haven't had a raise since that time - 1889.

Hiring practices for summer jobs in the Highway Department have recently come under fire from state Republican leaders. They have charged that hiring has become a matter of political patronage in which job applicants must be cleared through Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' office before being selected.

Republican State Chairman Dorman L. Steelman of Salem said a study of 392 referrals to the Hignway Department for summer work showed 269 Democrats, 39 Republicans and 65 whose political affiliation was unknown.

Earlier the House had created a special committee to investigate the possibility of discrimination in the hiring practices, but that was before the political furor and the committee's focus was essentially racial. When Republicans suggested that the committee could also investigate political discrimination, chairman John Conley, D-St. Louis, balked. Plans to call Floyd Warmann, the governor's patronage assistant, were cancelled.

"Is there someone perhaps behind the scenes who is trying to choke off further investigation; If so, who?" House Minority Leader R. J. (Bus) King, R-Clayton, wondered.

The House passed and sent to the Governor recently, a bill that would allow St. Louis county residents to vote on whether to put the non-partisan court plan in effect. In the plan, now being used in St. Louis and Kansas City, certain judges do not run for their posts as such. Instead, they first are appointed by a non-partisan commission. After a trial period voters decided if they are to be retained.

An amendment by Sen. William Waters, D-Liberty, would have given a similar right to choose to residents of Clay County. It was withdrawn when it appeared to endanger passage of the St. Louis County proposal.

Opponents of the bill argued that the bill did not remove the judges from public pressure. Instead, it put judges under bar association politics instead of letting the voters elect them. Opponents felt that, like legislators, a judge-s decision was a matter of opinion and ought to be subject to review by the people. Proponents said the plan takes the politics out of the courts and makes the judges more independent and produces better qualified men on the bench. They argued that a judge is not subject to the people's review in the same way as is a legislator. The legislator represents the people, the judge solves disputes among people.

What an unexciting summer! Here I am suppose to be writing an interesting and chatty little column and absolutely nothing interesting and chatty has happened. I think right about now would be a good time to take a vacation. Remember me? This is the summer that I was going to relax in, well it has turned out just like all the others, with one exception. Not only have the kids been sick but this year I've even managed a little of that myself. Then true to form, I ended up on that inevitable committee, and I forget my kids were old enough to learn swimming and that meant more taxi service; also, my calender is swamped with summer birthdays which must be recognized, and I give up. In other words, this summer is half way gone, and I haven't even had time to catch my second breath, much less relax!

I wonder if people with full time help really know how good they've got it? Course, I forgot I have to write this column once a week and the local news (and by the way, why has no one been calling me?) every day and it's no wonder I'm pooped. The next time they ask for volunteers for the space program, I'm going to request the moon mission. It looks so quiet up there. Oh my, another crisis, my youngest is having a tantrum (a loud one in case you're interested), because his brother is riding his bicycle in the street and I won't give the little one permission to join him on his trike. It would be so peaceful if I'd just say yes, but I'd sure hate to have to replace him! Well, I can take strong action, either that or large ear plugs, is definitely being called for, so if you'll pardon me people, I must go and make like that age-old villian, the mother.

Rehabilitation Has Its Inning at State Pen

JEFFERSON CITY -- On the high bluffs overlooking the Missouri River, golfers in Bermuda shorts and T shirts queue up to play and intricate, 18-hole miniature course. Near by, tables buzz with games of checkers and pinochle. From handball courts comes the hollow thunk of ball against board. The country-club atmosphere is deceptive -- and was planned that way as a part of a wall-to-wall overhaul that in two years has transformed the Missouri State Penitentiary at Jefferson City from what a visitor once termed a "loathsome stone purgatory" into one of the nation's model prisons.

For most of its 132 years, the Missouri poky resembled a Dickensian choky. Though custody was lax for the favored few who had money or political pull, most inmates lived in nightmarish squalor. At one time the prison held close to twice as many as it was supposed to, with many 12-ft by 9-ft. cubicles sleeping seven or more. Maggots and rats infested the food-handling areas. Gambling, homosexuality and use of drugs were rife, and as a result of their stay in "Jeff City," many convicts were more intractable when they left prison than when they went in.

A series of bloody riots in 1954 left seven convicts dead, injured scores of others, and cost $10 million in damage to buildings and equipment -- but did little to awaken the state government. In 1964, after 16 months of internal warfare among rival convict factions had killed seven men and hospitalized 205 others, the then Governor, John Dalton, sent in investigators to determine what had gone wrong. Nearly everything had. One day after a legislative committee issued a scathing report on conditions in the penitentiary, the warden shot himself. The state director of corrections left soon after, to be succeeded by Fred Wilkinson, 59, former deputy director of the federal Bureau of Prisons and the first professional penologist ever to run the sprawling (seven institutions 3,476 inmates(Missouri system.

Wilkinson and his new warden, Harold Swenson, 58, a longtime associate in the federal system, quickly established a new climate. Knives and forks -- hitherto forbidden as potentially dangerous weapons -- joined spoons on the dining tables; fresh fruit appeared on the breakfast menu; shower rooms were placed at the end of each cell-block tier so that convicts could bathe daily instead of twice a week. Cheap transistor radios were put on sale. For the first time, maximum - security prisons were allowed outdoors for recreation and supplied with pillows and mattresses instead of back-breaking straw ticks.

A burned-out cell block, still standing a decade after the riots, was replaced by a prisoner-built recreation building that has become the home of the Versatiles, an eight-man convict combo that perform at schools and other state institutions. Most important, the prison population has been reduced by 20%. Yet a truly professional administration also has its stern side. Guards, who had often snoozed in overstuffed chairs in the watchtowers, were now perched on high aluminum chairs and provided with M-1 carbines and sawedoff 12-gauge shotguns in place of puhy .22-cal. rifles. Many of the old-timers -- moonlighting farmers, bellhops and taxi drivers -- were replaced with younger, more competent men.

The real purpose of a prison, in Wilkinson's view, is not to keep prisoners happy -- or even to keep them in -- but to rehabilitate them. Everyone who can works at Missouri, and training and educational programs are being given top priority. Despite the reduced population, more inmates (710) are enrolled in rehabilitation programs now than ever before. The idea, of course, is to teach prisoners useful occupations, in the hope that most will never again see the inside of "Jeff City."

Pope Paul Revives Permanent Deacon Rank

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul VI today revived the permanent rank of ordained deacon in the Roman Catholic Church for both married and single men to help meet a shortage of priests.

In a document titled "Sacrum Diaconatus Ordinem" — the Sacred Order of the Diaconate, the pontiff carried out another major recommendation of the 1962-65 Vatican Ecumenical Council. It urged creation of permanent deacons to help in areas where priests are scarce.

The document was issued four days after a papal encyclical reaffirming the requirement that priests be celibate and rejecting demands that they be allowed to marry.

The deacons will be ordained ministers who can preach and confer some sacraments but not say Mass or hear confession, which only priests can do.

Those eligible for the permanent diaconate will be married men at least 35 years old, provided they have the consent of their wives, and single men at least 25 years old who must remain single after becoming deacons.

Establishment of the permanent diaconate in each nation will be left to the discretion of the national bishops conferences. Latin America, Africa and Asia, where the priest shortage is greatest, are expected to make the widest use of the new diaconate.

In recent centuries seminarians have been made sub-deacons and then deacons during the last few months before their ordination to the priesthood. The diaconate rank has been temporary, allowing the advanced seminarian to baptize, preach and give Communion.

Section of River Traffic Reopens

ST. LOUIS (AP)— The Coast Guard announced today a 35-mile section of the Missouri River from Waverly to Miami, Mo., was again open to traffic.

Travel is still restricted on the flood-swollen river below Miami, but a Coast Guard spokesman said additional reaches of the river will be reopened as soon as practicable.

The travel restriction was imposed more than a week ago because of high water conditions on the river. It was feared waves created by river craft might damage levees holding back the rampaging river.

The Coast Guard said the section of river was re-opened Monday night on the recommendation of Army engineers at Kansas City.

Spanish Fair Pavilion Ground-Breaking Set

ST. LOUIS (AP)— A groundbreaking ceremony to reconstruct the Spanish World's Fair pavilion in St. Louis will be held Friday.

Spokesmen for the fund-raising committee for the pavilion said about $1 million has been donated, but another $1.6 million is needed to finish the reconstruction work and equip the building.

The pavilion was given to St. Louis by the government of Spain after the New York World's Fair. It will be located north of Busch Memorial Stadium in downtown St. Louis.

Reserve Drill Duty Revised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon announced Tuesday that military Reservists who have served two years active duty generally will now be exempt from having to make weekly drills in the Ready Reserve.

The new policy may mean the release of thousands of men currently required to attend weekly meetings of Active Reserve or National Guard units.

The Pentagon said that "In no event shall a man who has served in Viet Nam be involuntarily assigned" to a Ready Reserve unit for weekly drill purposes.

The Army estimated there are 25,000 individuals mandatorily attached to Ready Reserve units who will be eligible for release, if they so desire, by Dec. 1.

Unspecified numbers of Navy and Air Force Reservists also are involved.

The policy was laid down in a memorandum to the services by Deputy Secretary of Defense Cyrus Vance.

The Lingering Shadow: The Warren Report ... And It's Critics

EDITOR'S NOTE— The defendant is a book. So is the prosecutor. On trial is the Warren Commission Report, indicted by men whose own books find it guilty. Guilty of haste. Guilty of bias. Guilty of a coverup. But neither critic nor commission is the jury. The public is. It, ultimately, will find where it thinks truth lies. But before considering its verdict, the public must ask for the facts. All the facts. Has it heard them? All of them?

By BERNARD GAVZER
and
SID MOODY
AP NEWSFEATURES WRITERS

PROLOGUE

The one slain has not died. Doubt will not let him.

Doubt asks: "How did you fall? By whose hand?" Doubt has heard an answer—"Lee Harvey Oswald did it"—from doctors, lawyers, government, from police, friends, foe.

But doubt does not believe. Not quite.

Doubt knows the stature of the seven somber men of the Warren Commission, the breadth of their investigation, the depth of their report. But doubt is not appeased. Not quite.

Doubt has heard of the rifle, the shells, the fingerprints, the handwriting, the blunted bullets, the people who said they saw. But doubt is not assured. Not quite.

Why is this so?

Because doubt was denied the certainty of a trial. Because not all is known. Because not all is answered and may never be. And because there have been other seekers than the commission. They have seen what the commission did not see: different shots from different places; plots where the commission saw none; design where the commission saw chance; doubt where the commission saw fact.

Are these seekers scavengers, as Texas Gov. John B. Connally has called them? Or are they impassioned skeptics, refusing to take "it is most likely" for an answer? Are they creators of doubt? or are they creatures of it? It is not always clear.

But if the Warren report is now doubted by many, it is because of the books written by these few seekers. If their number is small, their impact is not. The very existence of a printed page has an aura of authenticity above and beyond what it states. As the critics' books are increasingly read, they are increasingly believed. It is far easier to read one book from a shelf by a single critic than a whole shelf of books by a commission. No doubt takes root. The shelf lies fallow.

One could protest the whole argument is macabre—ghoulish. John F. Kennedy is gone. Talk won't bring him home. But this was a president. The people indeed have a right—nay, an obligation—to know what struck him down, and why. It was not just a death in the hearts of the nation. It was murder at the heart of the national structure. Assassination unsolved is assassination at large, possibly free to strike again, certainly free to poison and corrode by suspicion, mistrust, fear.

So it is not mere curiosity, not just to add a footnote to history, to ask who killed Kennedy. To preserve the absolutely vital trust of the people in their leaders and institutions, the question must be answered. And stay answered.

The quest may be long. It is still asked: Who killed Lincoln? John Wilkes Booth is not the answer to all seekers. Nor is Lee Harvey Oswald. Lincoln, however, is for the archivist. The wound from Dallas is still red. It is tender to questions of who, or why. It may ever be.

Or, perhaps, the wound may have been salved all along. Perhaps the first investigation need be the last.

Or, perhaps, the pain of doubt may throb the less if one were to ask the doubters of their proof, ask of the askers: What have you found, what news can you bring us?

I—THE CRITICS
THE COMMISSION

The critics of the Warren Commission Report have made grave charges. They have made uncertainty. They have made money.

Have they made a case?

Have they proved that the most extensive murder investigation in the nation's history, directed by some of its foremost citizens, was wrong, dead wrong? Was the commission guilty of haste, of bias, of a coverup and Lee Harvey Oswald innocent of murder? Do events such as those recently in New Orleans indicate justice has not been done?

Polls suggest increasing numbers of people think so.

Book after carefully footnoted book say so. The Warren Report was once on the best-seller lists. Now Mark Lane's "Rush to Judgment" is.

Which has spoken truth? The critics say they have. And fi-

Leo Sauvage

Mark Lane

Edward Epstein

commission has stood mute.

Mark Lane has said: "As long as we rely for information upon men blinded by the fear of what they might see, the precedent of the Warren Commission Report will continue to imperil the life of the law and dishonor those who wrote it little more than those who praise it."

And the commission has stood mute.

Leo Sauvage, in "The Oswald Affair," has said: "It is logically untenable, legally indefensible and morally inadmissible to declare Lee Harvey Oswald the assassin of President Kennedy."

And the commission has stood mute.

Edward Jay Epstein, in "Inquest," has said: "the conclusions of the Warren report must be viewed as expressions of political truth."

And the commission has stood mute.

It considered its first words, published in 27 volumes in the fall of 1964, to be its last. It has disbanded.

The public, in the jury box, may wonder at the commission's work. But it must also ask after the critics'. Is it true where the commission's is not? Are the critics innocent of the guilt they charge the commission of distortion, of selection of convenient fact, editing of truth?

Mark Lane wrote that the commission "cited evidence out of context, ignored and rejected evidence and—which is worse—oversimplified evidence."

Did he?

Lane and the other critics have produced little in the way of new evidence. What they have done is use what the commission provides in its 26 volumes of testimony and exhibits —but to different conclusions. The critics' case rests on the same bedrock as the commission's—the Warren report.

How have the critics used, or abused, it?

On page 199 of the hardcover edition of "Rush to Judgment" Lane mentions an Illinois ballistics expert, Joseph D. Nicol. Nicol testified before the commission on Oswald's pistol, the shells found at the scene of the slaying of officer J. D. Tippitt and bullets recovered from Tippitt's body.

Lane says Nicol "appeared less than certain" the shells came from Oswald's gun. There is a footnote in the passage referring to Volume III of the hearings, Page 511. Few readers have the volumes much less the time to check Lane's thousands of citations. A pity.

On Page 511, Volume III Nicol is asked by commission counsel Melvin Eisenberg if he was "certain in your own mind of the identification" of the shells.

Nicol replied: "Yes; the marks on the firing pin particularly were very definitive. Apparently this firing pin had been subjected to some rather severe abuse, and there were numerous small and large striations which could be matched up very easily."

Yet Lane says Joseph D. Nicol appeared "less than certain."

In his book Epstein questions the commission's conclusion that Oswald was a good shot. He mentions the shot at Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker which missed. He mentions the testimony of Nelson Delgado, a fellow Marine who had watched Oswald on the firing line. Oswald, Delgado testified, got a lot of "Maggie's drawers"—complete misses.

Delgado said something else. On the rifle range he said Oswald "didn't give a darn. He just qualified. (He) wasn't trying to exert himself."

And Walker himself testified that his assailant "could have been a very good shot and just by chance (the bullet) hit the woodwork (of a window). There was enough deflection in it to miss me."

Don't these passages have some bearing on Oswald's marksmanship? Epstein evidently didn't think so. They don't appear in his book.

Lane devotes several pages to the testimony of a former Dallas patrolman, Napoleon J. Daniels, who said he saw a man resembling Jack Ruby enter police headquarters just before he shot Oswald. Lane takes issue with the commission for discussing Daniels' testimony "merits little credence."

But nowhere does Lane mention that Daniels was given a lie detector test. Daniels was asked if he had told the complete truth. He said yes. He was asked if he had deliberately made up any of his story. He answered no. The lie detector indicated both responses were "false." He was asked if he thought the person he saw enter the building was Jack Ruby. He said no. The test indicated this response was "true."

Is such evidence relevant to why the commission felt Daniels merited little credence? Lane evidently thought not.

One of Epstein's major points concerns the report of the autopsy on Kennedy. It concluded he had been shot in the back of the neck and the back of the head. An FBI report submitted Dec. 9, 1963 contradicted the doctors in several important areas, Epstein makes much of the difference.

Inquiry by the writers, however, has established that the FBI wrote its original report before getting that of the doctors, which reached the agency Dec. 23, 1963. The FBI nonetheless stuck to its original version in a supplemental report Jan. 13, 1964. The agency felt duty bound not to alter a report by its agents—its customary policy— even though other reports might contain other facts.

It was the commission's task to choose between the FBI agents—laymen who reported what they had overheard the autopsy doctors say—and the doctors themselves who were making the one authorized examination and full report. I chose the doctors.

Shouldn't a critical appraisal of the commission have made such an inquiry? If Epstein did, it is not recorded.

Such lapses of the critics do not prove or disprove that Oswald murdered. But do these lapses, and many others to be cited later, have some bearing on the objectivity the critics claim for themselves and deny the commission?

Did the critics, not the commission, "cite evidence out of context, ignore and reshape evidence"?

They did.

They have sat in judgment of the Warren Commission and found it wanting. But they are not judges. They have been prosecutors, making a case, where fact has served, they have used it. Where it has not, they have not.

If they have read all the evidence, they have not quoted it all. They have taken evidence to support their thesis, to launch speculation, But they have not taken all the evidence.

They have said "perhaps" and "it seems" and "it is likely." But they must say more. They must say here is the evidence. And as yet, such evidence has not been forthcoming.

The irony of the Warren report is that it is based on the same evidence as the books that attack it. The commission provided in the 26 volumes of testimony and exhibits and additional matter in the National Archives the results of its investigation. And this is the heart of the critics' case. Their witnesses were the commission's. Their evidence was the commission's. But, again, not all of it.

A doctor said Kennedy was shot from the front. A man saw a puff of smoke from some trees ahead of the motorcade. The police and others who saw smoke, were commission witnesses. The doctor, and others who thought Kennedy's throat wound was one of entrance, were commission witnesses. And they appear for the critics.

But not always in the critics' books does one read of the people who saw a rifle in the window of the Texas School Book Depository. Not always does one read the doctors' testimony that

"The staff was instructed to proceed in each instance on the possibility that Oswald was not involved. If they didn't want to proceed on that basis, the commission didn't want them to continue."

One lawyer, Wesley J. Liebeler, talked of Oswald as a marksman. "I took the position that you, well, you couldn't tell. The evidence that Oswald was able to shoot the President was that he did, He was lucky. Oswald had something in his sights that he knew he was never going to have again. I suspect he was up for it."

Liebeler talked of the "grassy knoll" where Lane and others think shots came from, in part because people ran in that direction after the gunfire.

"Would people do this? Would you if you knew or thought someone was firing from there? It depends upon instantaneous reaction. I might run after the motorcade, I might run for cover. But I'm sure most people would run to get out of the way."

Joe Ball, another staff member, talked of the rifle found on the sixth floor of the depository building which police first identified as a Mauser. Later it was determined to be a Mannlicher-Carcano, an Italian weapon. Critics have implied this switch suggests the weapon was planted.

"Evidence shows that Seymour Weitzman (who found the rifle) never handled it and saw it from five feet away. Weitzman and Deputy Sheriff Eugene Boone both testified it seemed to them to be a Mauser.

"Let's make it clear. It IS a Mauser. It is built on German patents and the Mauser refers to the bolt action. But Lane never dares to go so far as to say that Weitzman or Boone in any way suggest this is not the gun which was found on the sixth floor and which has been found beyond all doubt to have fired the bullets."

(This is not quite accurate. Lane, on Page 120 of the hardcover edition of "Rush to Judgment" writes: "Boone, unlike Weitzman, was shown the Mannlicher-Carcano which he was unable to identify as the weapon Weitzman had found."

Boone said no such thing. He was shown the rifle and testified: "It looks like the same rifle, I have no way of being positive."

And why wasn't he positive? Because he said he never handled the rifle.)

Ball talked of Epstein.

"He said I said Norman Redlich (one of the staff) used 'a turgid law review style.' I wrote Epstein's publisher and said I never used the word 'turgid' in my life. I had to go to the dictionary and look it up.

"His statement that the lawyers worked as part-time consultants is a lie. I made my residence in Washington, D.C., permanently from January to July 1964. I was allowed to come to my home in Long Beach, Calif., once a month, and I did. Epstein quotes me 39 times and I didn't talk to that man for over half an hour and that was in a New York hotel lobby."

Nine of the 10 staff members quoted by Epstein that these writers interviewed charge him with misstatements. Several of them wrote letters of protest to his professor for whom he wrote what became "Inquest" as a master's thesis. The professor replied to one that "experience has shown that all too often when a person is shown his own words on paper he is inclined to state that he did not make those remarks."

Experience showed this in Epstein's case, anyway.

Liebeler talked of finger and palm prints.

Oswald's palm print found on the rifle had little probative value, Liebeler said Lane, "especially since material that supports it. So, official and federal police officials almost to the last page, Lane identifies who issued inaccurate statements...were alone with the statements, Oswald and the weapon." The implication seems obvious.

"Well," said Liebeler, "we had to consider that in view of the performance of the Dallas Police Department, God rest their souls, were they so devilishly clever that they could have taken Oswald's print and planted it on the rifle and then taken it off again, or that they could have handled the rifle to Oswald to get the print? Of course, that would involve the judgment of Oswald, and no one think any one could have gotten Oswald to touch that rifle with a 50-foot pole? Of course not."

(Lane also suggests it is "curious" that a dullo police officer found a print on the rifle and the commission did and "lifted" it off the weapon—and that an FBI expert was unable to find any trace of Oswald's print on the gun several days later. The reader might also ask—but Lane doesn't—why the public, and there is a dollars, were going to have these books.

"The mass media devote time to the Lanes and the Epsteins because it sells. Coming up with the establishment viewpoint doesn't have much mileage."

One staff member talked of the charge that the commission entered the investigation with a preconceived notion of Oswald's guilt. "Nonsense. We looked for the incredible as well as the credible. All staff members were lawyers. What greater feather could it be in our caps to prove the FBI was wrong?"

A senior counsel discussed the wisdom of having used an adversary system in the investigation, with a prosecution against and a defense for Oswald. "It would have been most unequal; the government all on one side. The report would have sounded like a brief for the prosecution.

their first interpretation of Kennedy's wounds was not their final one.

The commission presented all the evidence it could find. The critics did not. As a group they have found commission wrong on almost anything but the fact of assassination itself.

(One critic, George C. Thomson, doesn't even agree with who was killed on that day in Dallas. None of them was John F. Kennedy who Thomson says is alive and last winter attended Truman Capote's famous masked ball.

Space does not permit a footnote analysis of the critical books, although this was done with several of them in preparing this report. (The notes made on Mark Lane's book alone run to 50,000 words).

The intention, rather, is to focus on several key issues in contention and compare what the commission volumes said with what the critics said they said. Such comparison is often illuminating. Such a comparison may not convince the two-thirds of those questioned in a recent poll who said they doubted the commission's conclusions.

But, at the least, it may serve to have asked of the critics what they have asked of the commission—the facts. All of them.

Surely, one can fault the commission. Why didn't it call this witness, investigate more deeply in that area? When there was doubt, too often the commission spoke, needlessly, in more positive language than the facts allowed. Maybe it should have behaved more as a court than a commission.

Maybe it would have been better for Oswald to have been represented vigorously by counsel. Maybe the commission did have an eye on the political clock in turning in its report while some investigations were still under way. Maybe. Maybe. Maybe.

Without question the commission was not infallible. But it has too long been the target of critics who have not received the same scrutiny they gave the Warren report. This does credit to no one.

But recently books have begun to appear attacking the critics, one by Charles Roberts of Newsweek magazine and another by Richard Warren Lewis, a magazine writer, and Lawrence Schiller, a photo-journalist.

And while the commission, albeit disbanded, has not spoken as an organization in its defense, many of its staff lawyers are now willing to do so. The writers interviewed 11 of the commission's 15 senior counsels.

They spoke of the contradicting eyewitnesses: those who thought the shots came from the Texas School Book Depository and those who didn't; those who didn't agree on what Oswald was wearing or what he looked like.

"I've had a lot of trial experience," said one of the key members of the commission staff. "I know witnesses don't agree. If you have testimony that has uniformity, you have to look out for perjury."

The staff lawyers talked of some of the puzzling testimony that may never be resolved: the gunsmith who said he fixed a gun for some one named Oswald, the men who saw some one who looked like Oswald at a firing range, the persons who saw Oswald driving a car (the commission decided he couldn't drive), the newsman in Dallas who said Oswald had been introduced to her as an anti-Castro route who thought Kennedy should be shot, the people who thought they saw Oswald in Jack Ruby's night club.

"We were beneficiaries of fraud," said one of the senior attorneys without mentioning any specific examples. "The thing that's most amazing to a member who wanted to get involved in this great event. I do appreciate this can happen, but I thought people would have too much regard for the nature of what we're trying to do."

They talked of why the commission had not defended itself.

"If we're so newsy over the Lanes and the Sauvages, who would believe us? We had all kinds of suggestions. One was that (Chief Justice Earl) Warren, himself, come out in defense of the report.

"I don't think that means anything. If I were in the press, I wouldn't be this. You'll be the fools if you did. But the press has an obligation to examine each book as it comes out and present it to the public as a searching for truth. And I think this might go on for 50 or 100 years. As long as people can make a quarter or a half-million dollars, we're going to have these books.

"The mass media devote time to the Lanes and the Epsteins because it sells. Coming up with the establishment viewpoint doesn't have much mileage."

The Lingering Shadow:

The Warren Report ... And It's Critics

EDITOR'S NOTE—The defendant is a book. So is the prosecutor. On trial is the Warren Commission Report, indicted by men whose own books find it guilty. Guilty of haste. Guilty of bias. Guilty of a coverup. But neither critic nor commission is the jury. The public is. It, ultimately, will find where it thinks truth lies. But before considering its verdict, the public must ask for the facts. All the facts. Has it heard them? All of them?

PROLOGUE

The one slain has not died. Doubt will not let him.

Doubt asks: "How did you fail? By whose hand?" Doubt has heard an answer—"Lee Harvey Oswald did it"—from doctors, lawyers, government; from police, friends, foe.

But doubt does not believe. Not quite.

Doubt knows the stature of the seven somber men of the Warren Commission, the breadth of their investigation, the depth of their report. But doubt is not appeased. Not quite.

Doubt has heard of the rifle, the shells, the fingerprints, the handwriting, the blunted bullets, the people who said they saw. But doubt is not assured. Not quite.

Why is this so?

Because doubt was denied the certainty of a trial. Because not all is known. Because not all is answered and may never be. And because there have been other seekers than the commission. They have seen what the commission did not see: different shots from different places; plots where the commission saw none; design where the commission saw chance; doubt where the commission saw fact.

Are these seekers scavengers, as Texas Gov. John B. Connally has called them? Or are they impassioned skeptics, refusing to take "it is most likely" for an answer? Are they creators of doubt? or are they creatures of it? It is not always clear.

But if the Warren report is now doubted by many, it is because of the books written by these few seekers. If their number is small, their impact is not. The very existence of a printed page has an aura of authenticity above and beyond what it says. As the critics' books are increasingly read, they are increasingly believed. It is far easier to read one book from a shelf by a single critic than a whole shelf of books by a commission. So doubt takes root. The shelf lies fallow.

One could protest the whole argument is macabre—ghoulish. John F. Kennedy is gone. Talk won't bring him home. But this was a president. The people he led have a right—say, an obligation—to know what struck him down, and why. It was not just a death in the hearts of the nation. It was murder at the heart of the national structure. Assassination unsolved is assassination at large, possibly free to strike again, certainly free to poison and corrode by suspicion, mistrust, fear.

So it is not mere curiosity, not just to add a footnote to history, to ask who killed Kennedy. To preserve the absolutely vital trust of the people in their leaders and institutions, the question must be answered. And stay answered.

The quest may be long. It is still asked: Who killed Lincoln? John Wilkes Booth is not the answer to all seekers. Nor is Lee Harvey Oswald. Lincoln, however, is for the archivist. The wound from Dallas is still red. It is tenier to questions of who, or why. It may ever be.

Or, perhaps, the wound may have been salved all along. Perhaps the first investigation need be the last.

Or, perhaps, the pain of doubt may throb the less if one were to ask the doubters of their proof, ask of the askers: What have you found, what news can you bring us?

I—THE CRITICS
THE COMMISSION

The critics of the Warren Commission Report have made grave charges. They have made uncertainty. They have made money.

Have they made a case?

Have they proved that the most extensive murder investigation in the nation's history, directed by some of its foremost citizens, was wrong, dead wrong? Was the commission guilty of haste, of bias, of a cover-up and Lee Harvey Oswald innocent of murder? Do events such as those recently in New Orleans indicate justice has not been done?

Polls suggest increasing numbers of people think so.

Book after carefully footnoted book say so. The Warren Report was once on the best-seller lists. Now Mark Lane's "Rush to Judgment" is.

Which has spoken truth? The critics say they have. And Mr. Lane has said: "As long as we rely for information upon men blinded by the fear of what they might see, the precedent of the Warren Commission Report will continue to imperil the life of the law and dishonor those who wrote it little more than those who praise it."

And the commission has stood mute.

Leo Sauvage, in "The Oswald Affair," has said: "It is logically untenable, legally indefensible and morally inadmissable to declare Lee Harvey Oswald the assassin of President Kennedy."

And the commission has stood mute.

Edward Jay Epstein, in "Inquest," has said: "the conclusions of the Warren report must be viewed as expressions of political truth."

And the commission has stood mute.

It considered its first words, published in 27 volumes in the fall of 1964, to be its last. It has disbanded.

The public, in the jury box, may wonder at the commission's work. But it must also ask after the critics'. Is it true where the commission is not? Are the critics innocent of the guilt they charge the commission of distortion, sly selection of convenient fact, editing of truth?

Mark Lane wrote that the commission "cited evidence out of context, ignored and rejected evidence and—which is worse—oversimplified evidence."

Did he?

Lane and the other critics have produced little in the way of new evidence. What they have done is use what the commission provides in its 26 volumes of testimony and exhibits —but to different conclusions. The critics' case rests on the same bedrock as the commission's—the Warren report.

How have the critics used, or abused, it?

On Page 199 of the hardcover edition of "Rush to Judgment" Lane mentions an Illinois ballistics expert, Joseph D. Nicol. Nicol testified before the commission on Oswald's pistol, the shells found at the scene of the slaying of officer J. D. Tippitt and bullets recovered from Tippitt's body.

Lane says Nicol "appeared less than certain" the shells came from Oswald's gun. There is a footnote in the passage referring to Volume III of the hearings, Page 511. Few readers have the volumes much less the time to check Lane's thousands of citations. A pity.

On Page 511, Volume III Nicol is asked by commission counsel Melvin Eisenberg if he was "certain in your own mind of the identification" of the shells, Nicol replied: "Yes; the marks on the firing pin particularly were very definitive. Apparently this firing pin had been subjected to some rather severe abuse, and there were numerous small and large striations which could be matched up very easily."

Yet Lane says Joseph D. Nicol appeared "less than certain."

In his book Epstein questions the commission's conclusion that Oswald was a good shot. He mentions the shot at Maj. Gen. Edwin A. Walker which missed. He mentions the testimony of Nelson Delgado, a fellow Marine who had watched Oswald on the firing line, Oswald, Delgado testified, got a lot of "Maggie's drawers"—complete misses.

Delgado said something else. On the rifle range he said Oswald "didn't give a darn. He just qualified. (He) wasn't hardly going to exert himself."

And Walker himself testified that his assailant "could have been a very good shot and just by chance (the bullet) hit the woodwork (of a window). There was enough deflection in it to miss me."

Don't these passages have some bearing on Oswald's marksmanship? Epstein evidently didn't think so. They don't appear in his book.

Lane devotes several pages to the testimony of a former Dallas patrolman, Napoleon J. Daniels, who said he saw a man resembling Jack Ruby enter police headquarters just before he shot Oswald. Lane takes issue with the commission for deciding Daniels' testimony "merits little credence."

But nowhere does Lane mention that Daniels was given a lie detector test, Daniels was asked if he had told the complete truth, He said yes. He was asked if he had deliberately made up any of his story. He answered no. The lie detector indicated both responses were "false." He was asked if he thought the person he saw enter the building was Jack Ruby. He said no. The test indicated this response was "true."

Is such evidence relevant to why the commission felt Daniels merited little credence? Lane evidently thought not.

One of Epstein's major points concerns the report of the autopsy on Kennedy. It concluded he had been shot in the back of the neck and the back of the head. An FBI report submitted Dec. 9, 1963 contradicted the doctors in several important areas, Epstein makes much of the difference.

Inquiry by the writers, however, has established that the FBI wrote its original report before getting that of the doctors, which reached the agency Dec. 23, 1963. The FBI nonetheless stuck to its original version in a supplemental report Jan. 13, 1964. The agency felt duty bound not to alter a report by its agents—its customary policy—even though other reports might contain other facts.

It was the commission's task to choose between the FBI agents—laymen who reported what they had overheard the autopsy doctors say—and the doctors themselves who were making the one authorized examination and full report. It chose the doctors.

Shouldn't a critical appraisal of the commission have made such an inquiry? If Epstein did, it is not recorded.

Such lapses of the critics do not prove or disprove that Oswald murdered. But do these lapses, and many others to be cited later, have some bearing on the objectivity the critics claim for themselves and deny the commission?

Did the critics, not the commission, "cite evidence out of context, ignore and reshape evidence?"

They did.

They have sat in judgment of the Warren Commission and found it wanting. But they are not judges. They have been prosecutors, making a case. Where fact has served, they have used it. Where it has not, they have not.

If they have read all the evidence, they have not quoted it all. They have taken evidence to form theories, launch speculation, But they have not taken all the evidence.

They have said "perhaps" and "it seems" and "it is likely." But they must say more. They must say here is the evidence. And as yet, such evidence has not been forthcoming.

The irony of the Warren report is that it is based on the same evidence as the books that attack it. The commission provided in the 26 volumes of testimony and exhibits and additional matter in the National Archives the results of its investigation. And this is the heart of the critics' case. Their witness were the commission's. Their evidence was the commission's. But, again, not all of it.

A doctor said Kennedy was shot from the front. A man saw a puff of smoke from some trees ahead of the motorcade. The man, and others who saw smoke, were commission witnesses. The doctors, and others who thought Kennedy's throat wound was one of entrance, were commission witnesses.

And they appear for the critics, what not always in the critics' books does one read of the people who saw a rifle in the window of the Texas School Book Depository. Not always does one read the doctors' testimony that

Surtax Holds No Guarantee

NEW YORK (AP) — A tax surcharge, which the head of the Federal Reserve Board suggested this week is the main need of the economy, could turn out to mean more economic headaches—and less revenue than is hoped for.

This is a tricky measure. Expert as the tax technicians may be in this era of the manipulated economy, they cannot foresee all the consequences of the surtax plan. This probably explains the hesitancy in putting the plan into action.

It was first proposed by the administration early this year as a six per cent surcharge on all corporate and personal income taxes—in effect a tax on your taxes. The reasoning behind the proposal was that a vigorous 1967 economy would need a restraining influence.

It is being advocated now—by William McChesney Martin, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board—as a revenue builder that might help offset a deficit in government financing and lessen the threat of inflation.

But the 1967 economy has not been as strong as anticipated, even though Martin referred to "the recovery under way." A surtax could shrink the tax base by slowing business. And if the base shrinks, so will the revenue produced from it.

Problems such as this are what lead to recurring opinions that the Johnson administration has few options. The needle on the compass points to some unpleasant weather in any direction.

As Martin indicated, the big problem is the government's big deficit, estimated at somewhere between $13.5 billion and $29.2 billion and which, in some ways, is a contradiction to other federal policies.

For example, both the Johnson administration and the Federal Reserve have been using all their efforts this year to make credit more easily available and at lower rates. The reason: to prod the economy.

However, not all interest rates have gone down. Long-term rates—the charges on loans for periods of many years—actually have risen, and now some business loans are being made at record-high charges.

The fear now is that these high interest rates may develop also in consumer loans and in the home-mortgage market. This would abort completely the Federal Reserve's easy-money policy, which already has been less than successful.

As Martin indicated, the contradictory behavior of interest rates is based on a fear of the big government deficit, a deficit that means the government will have to borrow money.

When the government goes into the market for huge sums of money, it can cause additional upward pressure on interest rates. Some corporate treasurers, therefore, are borrowing now in advance of requirements to avoid a future shortage or higher rates.

Water Standards Set on 34 Streams

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—The State Water Pollution Board announced today it has set water quality standards on 34 interstate streams.

The drainage areas cover about two-thirds of the state.

Federal approval of the standards is expected by October. The federal water pollution control administration already has commented favorably on the standards.

The state board has established 149 monitoring stations to check water quality and detect any changes.

Sources of pollution on the Missouri River are expected to be cleaned up by the end of 1968 and those on the Mississippi by March 1, 1969.

Water standards are expected to be set up for other streams in the state by the end of this year after further public hearings.

Matthews CWF Officers Installed

MATTHEWS - "Thy Will Be Done" was the theme of the candlelight installation of officers when the Christian Women's Fellowship met at the church Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Frank Bowman Collects Recipes, Teaches Class

Editor's Note: This is the 43rd in a series of articles about the home life of Sikeston area families.

By RUTH DILLENDER

DEXTER -- Mrs. Lynda Bowman, route one, says that she enjoys collecting recipes of all kinds.

Mrs. Bowman and her husband, Frank, have two sons, Michael Dennis, five years old, and Mark Allen, 16 months old. The couple has lived in Dexter about six and a half years.

Mrs. Bowman is a native of Poplar Bluff.

The family attends the Southwest Church of the Nazarene, where Mrs. Bowman teaches a junior high Sunday School class and is a member of the prayer and fasting league. She helped decorate for a banquet that honored high school and college graduates of the church.

Bowman is a driver for the United Parcel Service in Sikeston. He bowls and has won second place in a 50-game bowlathon.

Treasures in the Bowman home are an antique French telephone and a silver tea service, given to Mrs. Bowman by her husband.

Mrs. Bowman is Dexter reporter for the Sikeston Daily Standard.

ITALIAN SPAGHETTI

Tomato sauce:

Saute one onion in oil, with one or two cloves garlic, minced. Add one pound ground beef and brown. Add one tablespoon parsley, one teaspoon basil leaves, one half teaspoon oregano, one half teaspoon Italian seasoning, one teaspoon sugar, and salt and pepper to taste.

Add one eight-ounce can tomato sauce, one no. 2 can tomatoes, that have been chopped up with fork, one can mushrooms (stems and pieces) and one quart tomato juice.

LASAGNE

Make spaghetti sauce. Mean - while cook about 12 lasagne noodles according to directions on package. Drain.

Place the ingredients in layers in 9 by 13-inch baking dish, in order listed, beginning and ending with sauce. Repeat until all ingredients are used. There should be about four layers:

Sauce, single layer of noodles, mixture of 3/4 pound ricotta cheese, 1 tablespoon minched parsley, one teaspoon oregano, 3/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese and 3/4 pound grated Mozarella cheese.

Cottage cheese may be substituted for ricotta cheese.

CHICKEN-BROCCOLI CASSEROLE

4 chicken breasts with skins removed

1 package frozen broccoli

1 can chicken broth plus two chicken bouillion cubes

Buttered bread crumbs

Crumbled American cheese

Salt and pepper chicken breasts. Roll in flour and brown on both sides in oil, about four to five minutes on each side. Cook broccoli as directed on package.

Arrange chicken in baking dish and top with cooked broccoli. Pour chicken broth in skillet in which chicken has been browned. Season to taste.

Thicken with flour and milk mixture. Pour over chicken and broccoli. Top with bread crumbs and crumbled cheese. Sprinkle with paprika. Bake covered for 40 minutes at 350 degrees. Uncover and bake 10 additional minutes.

CEDRIC'S CASSEROLE

Saute one medium onion, chopped, in three tablespoons butter. Add one pound ground beef, salt and pepper to taste, heating through but not browning. Spread three cups coarsely shredded cabbage in two-quart baking dish. Cover with meat mixture and top with two more cups shredded cabbage.

Pour 10½-ounce can condensed tomato soup over top. Bake covered one hour at 350 degrees.

WACKY CHOCOLATE CAKE

Combine:

2 cups sugar

12 tablespoons Wesson oil

Add:

2 tablespoons vinegar

1 tablespoon vanilla

Sift together:

3 cups flour

4 tablespoons cocoa

1 tablespoons salt

2 teaspoons soda

Add to mixture alternately with 2 cups cool water. Add one fluid ounce of red food color. Batter will be thin.

Pour into greased and floured cake pans and bake at 350 degrees until done. This recipe makes a two layer cake.

PURE BUTTER ICING

1½ cups milk

¼ cup flour

Combine and cook over low heat until the mixture begins to thicken. Set aside and cool.

Cream:

1 cup sugar

1 cup pure butter

1 teaspoons vanilla

A sailor who limped into the Naval dispensary had his foot X-rayed and was asked to wait for the results. A while later a corpsman appeared and handed the sailor a large pill. Just then a mother with a child in need of immediate attention entered. After the corpsman disappeared with the new patient, the sailor hobbled over to the drinking fountain, swallowed the pill and sat down to wait. Some time later the corpsman reappeared, carrying a bucket of water. "Okay," he said. "Let's drop the pill in this bucket and soak that foot."

Dead Fish Still Mystery At Dexter

DEXTER -- All fishermen and fish experts who have their own pet theories about what happened to the hundreds of fish that died in the Dexter lake can now continue to speculate, because the mystery remains.

Tests, made by experts from the fisheries research laboratory of the Missouri department of conservation show that the tests "were negative for the presence of toxic organic compounds".

In other words, there was no poison in the lake to kill them, according to the letter received late last week by Mayor Willis Conner from James R. Whitley, supervisor of the water quality investigations for the state agency.

Approximately 5,000 pounds of fish, the vast majority of which were described by Dexter Water Superintendent O. D. Hill as Hickory Shad, died in the 12-acre lake several days ago. They were "scooped out" by city crews and buried.

And so -- the mystery remains, and there are numerous theories as to what caused the fish to die. But all are pure speculation.

No more fish have died in the lake, and everything at the fishing area "seems to be normal", city officials pointed out.

The letter from Whitley said that "laboratory biossay tests have been completed on the water samples collected from your city lake by biologist Tom Russell. Tests were negative for the presence of toxic organic compounds. The water was more alkaline than usual. This condition may be related in some way to treatment of the new well. The water sample collected directly from the well after pumping for 48 hours was normal."

"It is often difficult", the letter continued "to determine the exact cause of fish mortality unless chemical determinations and examinations of fish can be made at the time the fish are dying".

"I hope you have no further problems in your fishing lake", the letter concluded.

Mayor Conner had requested that the Missouri Department of Conservation make the tests after the fish were found dead.

The book contains descriptions of 24 playwrights whose works were produced by the Theater Guild of which Langner was a co-founder. Miss Marshall said release of the material had been delayed because she felt another Langner work, "G.B.S. and the Lunatic" was published too soon after her husband's death in 1962.

Construction Wonders Of America

"THE ARSENAL OF DEMOCRACY"

As Adolf Hitler in the late 1930s took over most of the European continent piece by piece and the Allies' capacity for defeating him seemed to become less and less, a majority of American citizens were not neutral in thought -- even though they had to be in action.

Finally, at the opening of the new session of Congress in 1941, President Roosevelt issued a clarion call for altering our neutrality posture and making America "the arsenal of democracy." Two months later, a still reluctant Congress made the all-important concession: It modified the neutrality law of the land to permit the belligerents to obtain war materials from the United States on a "cash and carry" basis.

Passage of "Lend Lease" was followed by an appropriation of $7,000,000,000 -- later increased by another $6,000,000,000. Britain and France promptly took advantage of the new law by placing large orders with American firms. Soon, 6,000,000 workers had been added to the nation's payrolls for the greatest production upsurge that the country had ever seen.

Under the stimulus of war orders and an urge to ready ourselves for our own upcoming survival struggle, American industry -- with a tremendous assist from construction men -- planned for and then produced the "45,000 tanks and 60,000 planes in 1942" and "75,000 tanks and 125,000 planes in 1943" set as a target by President Roosevelt shortly after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

This was indeed an American "wonder" -- along with the courage of 12,000,000 U. S. servicemen and women quickly readied for action on two fronts -- which Hitler and the Japanese warlords failed utterly to consider as possible, and which eventually brought them to complete defeat.

Snow White Robin In Springfield Yard

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. AP - At first the Homer L. Manleys thought they had a young dove in their backyard. Then they saw another robin feeding the snow white bird in the midst of several normal baby robins.

The clincher was when the family dog chased the bird, and it chirped like a robin.

The Manleys say the bird seems friendlier than other wild birds and is easy to approach. The National Geographic Society says this may be because albinos have weak eyes.

Albino birds are usually shunned by their fellow, the Society says.

So as the Manleys' albino grows older, it will probably be driven from feeding and nesting places.

Lurleen Wallace Faces Surgery

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) - Gov. Lurleen Wallace of Alabama says she has a malignancy which may require surgery again.

The nation's only woman governor said she would enter M.D. Anderson Hospital in Houston, Tex., next week on the recommendation of her doctors. The hospital is noted for its treatment and study of cancer.

Eighteen months ago, Mrs. Wallace underwent a hysterectomy for what was described as an early malignant tumor of the uterus.
